PLANNERS WILL DEMAND EIR ON SPANISH BAY ... PAGE 21

CARMEL SCHOOL officials (from left) Supt. William Rand, board President Ken White and Trustee Doyle Clayton spent a day of whirlwind lobbying in Sacramento May 9 in a last-ditch attempt to persuade local legislators to pass a major educational reform and financial package. The lobbying trip is also a signal that small school districts must band together to form a collective voice in Sacramento. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Carmel school officials flex muscle in Sacramento

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TIRED OF being second cousins to their larger compatriots, small school districts throughout the state are banding together to form a new political alliance that is expected to become another major lobbying force in Sacramento.

At least 40 districts with enrollments of less than 2,500 full-time students have joined a new organization called the Small School Districts' Association (SSDA), which has already hired a major legislative advocacy agency to lobby Sacramento lawmakers on measures which range from transportation subsidies to minimum competency standards for teachers.

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education, with two trustees fresh from a day in Sacramento where they attended a morning planning session for the Small School Districts' Association and spent an afternoon on legislative lobbying, is expected to join the SSDA when it meets at 7:30 p.m. May 23 at the Carmel Middle School library, Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

The first major challenge for the new association is the upcoming Senate battle over the far-reaching education reform and financing package put together by state Sen. Gary Hart (D-18th) of Santa Barbara and state Supt. of Public Instruction Louis (Bill) Honig.

Because it is a tax-raising measure, SB 813 must obtain a two-thirds majority when the measure comes up for a senate vote today (May 19).

If the bill gets the necessary 27 senatorial votes, it still must hurdle the assembly and be

'We've had it'

Dear Editor:

When I read about the $700,000 proposed cuts that the budget task force has laid out for the Carmel Unified School Board to consider for next year's budget, I got furious. It's time for everyone to get on the backs of our state legislators and tell them that we've had it with the lack of state support for education. If the Hart-Honig bill passes, it will help solve the problem.

For the past several years our local school budget committees have said that our district budget is at the bare bones level, but each year the board has had to chop. In order to operate in the black this coming year, the board is looking at drastic cuts, although I'm sure that each board member would favor expanding the budget rather than trimming it.

I have seen the drop of quality in the Carmel schools. This year we have nearly 35 children in each of our kindergartens. Pathetic. Our elementary music program is minimal, but the task force says eliminate one teacher which will leave one elementary music teacher to serve 810 children in three schools located far apart from each other. Ridiculous.

They've recommended cutting the district's contribution to the already poorly supported GATE program for our gifted and talented students. Handicapped student services are also on the hit list. These are but a few examples. The whittling and hacking permeates the middle and high school programs too, not to mention the district's great need for funds for adequate teacher compensation, school facilities and buses.

Wise up, CUSD board members. Form committees to protest lack of funding rather than to look for ways to cut. It's time to tell our state legislators that we will close our schools early if necessary but we will not accept any more cuts in our fundamental school programs.

Our own miracle

Dear Editor:

"Expect a miracle," is a bumper sticker that always makes me smile because I really do believe in them. But to actually have one happen to you is an overwhelming experience.

It wasn't only what happened in ER on the anxiety-filled morning but it was the incredibly powerful and beautiful outpouring of love, support and prayers from so many dear friends and also from total strangers.

I always knew we were blessed to be living in the incomparable beauty of this peninsula, but one doesn't have to look very far to find the true value in the quality of life here. It is the people who make up this community. The depth of the caring and concern displayed towards our family was heart warming and happily received.

Try living in Dinuba

Dear Editor:

I would like to reply to Susan Johnson's letter of May 12. (If she is still alive.)

Dear Susan: You've lived here a year and a half and haven't been struck by a car? How fortunate you are!

I've lived here for five years and have spent nearly four of those in the hospital and much of that time spent in a long line of ambulances with other victims of vehicular madness.

I am employed by a gentleman who has been in Carmel for over 40 years and cannot remember how many times he has been struck. He tells us the last time he was on his way to a fencing lesson he was run down by a streetcar.

Susan, if you think it is dangerous here, you should try living in Dinuba.

Remove hazardous trees

Dear Editor:

The forestry department and forestry commission of the city are to be commended for proposing in the coming city budget that a sum be allocated for the removal of a variety of eucalyptus trees from city property.

While some individuals may decry the proposal as contrary to the spirit of life in Carmel where trees play a pre-eminent role, and others may oppose the proposal on the basis of the rather large sum of money to be expended, such critics should ask themselves what price in money can be placed on the value of a human life or should esthetics (if eucalyptus can be said to have any esthetic value) be placed ahead of property damage or bodily injury.

While a statement was made some time ago by a member of the city forestry department that no damage had occurred to private property from any city trees falling down during the many rainstorms this year, this was not, in fact, the truth of the matter.

In the very area that has been identified by the city as the most dangerous for continued existence of some trees, one very large tree smashed down from the city property onto a private home and put the garage out of commission and incurred damages that have run to the $10,000 level to repair.

The sum is not inconsiderable and the liability for city responsibility, at least in this case, was apparent. Fortunately no one was in the garage at the time but if the wind had changed direction, it might well have smashed into the living quarters. And the remaining trees in that area could well do so in the next rainy and windy period.

While trees are nice, human life still has priority in Carmel, I hope, and thus the city council should not hesitate to make the proper decisions — to remove the hazardous trees.

'Abortion to senses'

Dear Editor:

I just made my semi-annual pilgrimage to the mouth of Carmel Valley. You remember that place don't you?

I've been aware of the abominable assortment of architecture, but what I saw was impossible to believe. Those three or four massive ugly hulks near the ugly post office are abortions of poor planning and architectural control boards!

The latest and nearly the last to be erected (thank God) is squeezed on a lot between two well-thought-out Tudor-type buildings in the square block facing the beautiful Barnyard complex. This two-story, concrete interlocking structure on four separately-owned lots is unbelievably out of context with the buildings at either end of The Barnyard.

This is a San Jose and Southern California "Valley Girl" miscarriage, and is impossible to believe!

I'm not real smart, but I've always given the people in our Valley ghetto high marks for being intelligent and concerned citizens. However, this is too much, even for the uneducated like myself!

I was impressed by the wandering small stores of The Crossroads. However, the back side of the development should never have been allowed, because it's another Monterey Heritage Harbor, over done-type bankruptcy location! What would have complemented the whole rear area would have been a miniature Oriental garden to be a viewing spot for the strollers — not spenders — that will only accommodate the outer edge of stores and parking.

Money is not the answer to all the woes of the schools

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE FULL IMPACT of the fiscal crisis in California public schools triggered by passage of Prop. 13 has been felt in every school district in the state, including the Carmel Unified School District.

Faced with a potential budget shortfall of some $700,000 in the 1983-84 fiscal year, trustees of the Carmel district recently traveled to Sacramento to press for passage of the Hart-Honig Bill, which would relieve some of the financial pressure on smaller school districts. (See coverage in this issue.)

The Carmel Unified School District's revenue woes are a double-barreled result of declining student enrollment and reduced state revenues, a combination which already has forced closure of some schools and instigated plans for the sale of surplus school property.

As this eleventh-hour showdown over school finance takes place in Sacramento, another interesting development has taken place within the local school district.

The president of the Association of Carmel Teachers recently suggested that trustees should operate a "quality" educational program for as long as possible with what funds are available, then simply close the schools. (See related story in this issue.)

Such a drastic measure, according to Mrs. Imogene Spesier, would be effective in getting the attention of the public and legislators in Sacramento about the poor financial shape of public school systems in California. Teachers should stop "going that extra mile" in order to "wake up" those who control the public purse strings, the ACT president suggested.

These types of extreme reactions are understandable, in light of what has become a desperate situation in public education. Prop. 13 was a bad law and should never have been enacted. More importantly, perhaps, it never delivered one of its major selling points — the elimination of bureaucratic "fat" in the schools and in government. Instead, educational programs and students have been most affected by it.

At the same time, however, there are signs that not all of the woes of the public schools can be attributed to financial difficulties.

The Los Angeles Times, in a special report on parochial schools in the Los Angeles area in its April 26 edition, pointed out that schools operated by Roman Catholic archdioceses generally spend far less to educate their students than do the public schools, and with much better results.

According to the Los Angeles Times, most Catholic schools in the Los Angeles metropolitan area spend less than $1,000 per child per year. By contrast, the Los Angeles public schools spent more than $2,281 per child in 1982 — more than twice the amount the Catholic schools spent.

Teachers in parochial schools in the Los Angeles area earn, on the average, only about $12,000 per year as compared with the average yearly wage of public school teachers in the Los Angeles area of about $24,279, according to the Times.

And students in Catholic schools show up better on standardized national reading and math tests than do students in the public schools, which probably is the result, according to the article, of the fact "the parochial school students took more academic courses, did more home work, were absent less often, and had fewer discipline problems."

Supt. of Public Instruction Louis ("Bill") Honig told The Los Angeles Times the comparison between performance of Catholic and public schools "shows what works — high standards, discipline, homework, taking the right courses. There are public schools doing these things, and they are getting the same good results."

The Carmel Unified School District, as far as public school districts is concerned, is one of those which has strived to maintain high academic standards and which has accomplished good results, as measured in terms of test scores and in terms of college admissions. There is a high level of parental support and teacher involvement in quality education.

So even though the local school district — like many others across the state — faces some very tough financial times, it should be clear that money alone is not the key to quality education. In the scramble for badly-needed funds, let's hope teachers, administrators, and trustees don't forget that.

community at large. I came here in 1963 with great hopes intelligent planners were at work to protect this little paradise north. Sorry to say, the commercial area is an unbelievable abortion to the senses!

Environmental coalition seeks to halt Pico Blanco heavy mining operation

By JOE LIVERNOIS

A COALITION of environmentalist groups has launched a campaign to protect Pico Blanco, a Big Sur natural landmark, and the nearby Little Sur River from heavy mining.

The newly-formed Pico Blanco Coalition wants Monterey County supervisors to take responsibility for the fate of Pico Blanco.

The organization includes members of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the Audubon Society and the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society.

Granite Rock Co. of Watsonville owns most of the 3,709-foot mountain and intends to mine the white limestone contained in Pico Blanco. Seven acres are within the federal Los Padres Wilderness Area.

But the Pico Blanco Coalition maintains the mining operation would ruin the Little Sur River watershed and that the pristine wilderness area of Pico Blanco would be invaded by a fleet of bulldozers and mining trucks.

The county has no authority to halt mining operations on the seven acres of federal land to which Granite has a claim, but it could thwart mining on federal land with its permit authority to build roads and allow earth moving activities on non-federal land which provides access to mining areas.

A mining operation would require construction of new roads, conveyor facilities and, perhaps, docking facilities along the Big Sur coast, coalition members believe.

Although Monterey County supervisors say they would hate to see Granite Rock mine north, east and west by Los Padres National Forest.

The peak has been described as the centerpiece landmark of the Big Sur coast. The "white peak" is so named because of the white limestone that forms its mass.

Granite Rock purchased the mountain in 1963, reportedly for about $150,000. It owns land and mining claims that cover about 2,800 acres around it. Company officials have always maintained they do not plan to mine the peak; rather, they hope to mine from its southern and eastern flanks, which would protect the coastal views from Highway 1.

"Granite Rock has focused public discussion on one component, that being the scarring of the mountain," Hillyer said. Rock says they will not change the silhouette.

"But we're also concerned, more importantly, that (mining operations) will disrupt the entire Little Sur watershed." In addition, traffic on Highway 1 would increase considerably, he said.

MEMBERS OF the Pico Blanco Coalition met in the Hudson House meeting room at Point Lobos State Reserve last week to determine strategy to increase public awareness and to put some pressure on the board of supervisors.

Mrs. Figen said the public "is not very much aware of the problem" but, when told, remember that Pico Blanco is "where they went to Scout camp."

As a result, protection of Pico Blanco has become "sort of a motherhood issue."

Hillyer maintains Monterey County has the ultimate practical authority to protect Pico Blanco from the mining operations.

He said the Coastal Commission has become virtually powerless in the past several months and that the commission staff is overworked. He also said Gov. George Deukmejian has never been noted for his concern for the environment.

"There's no one the county can pass the buck to," he said. "I'm afraid the Coastal Commission is not strong enough to set it right and there is no real possibility for federal intervention."

And Doug Sprague, special representative for the California Mining and Geology Board, said the only way his board can intervene is if it issues a "designation" that names Pico Blanco an area which contains resources of "statewide significance."

Even then, the board would only have review and appellate powers and, upon appeal, it can only remand a local decision to the local agency with recommendations. In other words, he said, the mining and geology board does not make local land use decisions.

Sprague said Granite Rock has not petitioned the mining board for a "determination."

"And we would try to talk them out of it if they did," Sprague said. "We're constrained by a lot of things" and the mining board staff does not have the time or the manpower to make a timely determination.

INSTEAD, HE SAID, Granite Rock sought and received a "classification" for Pico Blanco that recognizes the mountain as a "significant mineral deposit."

In doing so, the California Mining and Geology Board provided "technical information" to the county and the Coastal Commission to help them make their land use decisions.

When he named Pico Blanco a "significant mineral deposit," a state geologist described the character of the mountain and its deposit for technical purposes, Sprague said.

"The geologist ignores local land use policies" when he studies a mineral resource deposit, he said. "He doesn't care if city hall

Pico Blanco, they have done almost nothing to prevent it, according to Saunders Hillyer, an attorney and former executive director of the Big Sur Foundation.

Hillyer told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week that supervisors have "ultimate authority" over land use decisions in Big Sur when they draft land use policies that will be incorporated in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program.

"The board of supervisors has considered the Big Sur Land Use Plan for three years now and the plan has gone through several versions," Hillyer said. "People are just now putting together pieces of the puzzle and they have found that the plan that has emerged has weak, weak mineral resources policies. We urge the supervisors to tighten them up."

Supervisors apparently feel they have an obligation to compensate Granite Rock if it comes up with policies that would prevent mining of Pico Blanco, Hillyer said.

BUT HILLYER SAID the county has put the proverbial cart before the horse. He said Pico Blanco will not have any mineral value if land use policies forbid mining.

"The county does not have the responsibility to focus on dollars and cents," Hillyer said. "Its responsibility is to fulfill its role in protecting the Little Sur watershed. The county should focus on adopting a sound land use plan, rather than focusing its efforts on helping or hurting land values."

"The board doesn't seem to have exercised as much authority as it could," said Janie Figen, who is chairwoman of the Pico Blanco Coalition. "Apparently, the board has only heard from those who want environmental constraints lifted."

The board of supervisors was scheduled to open a public hearing on the Big Sur Local Coastal Program May 17, but decided last week to continue the hearing indefinitely.

Pico Blanco is located about five miles inland of Point Sur near the south fork of the Little Sur River. It is surrounded to the PICO BLANCO (above) has been described as the centerpiece landmark of the Big Sur coastline. But a coalition of three environmental groups believes land use policies in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program do not adequately protect the "white peak" or the nearby Little Sur River from a limestone mining operation planned by Granite Rock Co., which owns much of the mountain.

Community 'weed-out'

ALICE MEHDY, a landscape designer, and helper Felix Cabrera knocked down some of the heavy weeds along the median strip on Carmel Valley Road during the "community weed out" last week. But more work needs to be done, according to Karin Strasser Kauffman, organizer of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association median strip committee.

The weeding project will resume at 8 a.m. June 5. She said the "weed out" is an opportunity for Carmel Valley residents to "take care of your own back yard. Ms. Mehdy designed the landscape in the median strip last year, using only plants native to the Monterey Peninsula. For more information, call 659-4463. (Photo by Joe Livernois.)

is sitting on it or if it's in the middle of Yosemite."

The geologist presents the information, "and then it's up to the local jurisdiction to make their land use decisions. Those decisions can be based on its own ordinances and plans. We stay out of it."

Pico Blanco was given the "classification" by the mining board on May 18, 1982.

Whether or not such a classification increases the monetary value of Pico Blanco is open to interpretation.

And, Hillyer added, compensation should not be the overriding issue.

Stephen Slade, administrative assistant to Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley, agrees. But it can't be overlooked either, he said.

"Obviously, the county can't pay 'X' amount of dollars to the company," Slade remarked.

He said Granite Rock officials maintain the white limestone at Pico Blanco is one of the largest and finest deposits of high-grade limestone in western United States.

While county officials do not wish to allow mining operations there, if there is a "national overriding need" for the deposit, the value of the mountain could increase tremendously.

Limestone is used by steel manufacturers to draw impurities from iron ore. It is an essential ingredient in cement and it is used as an ingredient of paint, wall coverings and dental plates.

The Monterey County Counsel's Office is still considering the possible liabilities the county could accrue if it prevents mining in the area.

"The board has got to remember that the major industry in the area is tourism," said Mrs. Figen. "And the tourism is based on what the natural area looks like. That is something the board must remember when it considers the Big Sur plan."

One of the components of the fate of Pico Blanco will be contained in the Little Sur Water Management Plan, according to Hillyer. The Monterey County Planning Commission is scheduled to conduct a public hearing on the draft of the plan released late last week.

Hillyer said he has not yet seen a copy of the latest draft, though he said preliminary drafts of the plan "looked good in many respects. It does have a lot of good resource data and analysis and it contains a lot of good policies."

"But it makes no statement about mining. In that respect, (the planning department) has ducked the big issue."

He said he believes specific language should be included in the draft that would prohibit mining in or near the Little Sur watershed.

Charter meeting May 20 for Carmel River panel

By JOE LIVERNOIS

SOME CARMEL area faces familiar around Monterey Peninsula Water Management District offices will gather in an official capacity May 20 for the charter meeting of the Carmel River Management Program Advisory Committee.

Seven Carmel area residents were named to the advisory committee by water district board members when they met May 9 in Monterey City Hall.

The newly-formed committee will meet at 3 p.m. May 20 in water district offices to select a chairman.

"Eventually, the board is going to make recommendations to set up the river management zone," said Bruce Buel, manager of the water management district.

The proposed $150,000-per-year river management program would coordinate erosion control efforts along the banks of the Carmel River. According to proposed rules and regulations that would implement the program, the plan would "protect the water course, the watershed, public ways, life and property in the zone, promote the restoration of river banks and scenic resources; reduce environmental degradation and enhance the fish and wildlife habitat."

The program is scheduled for election among Carmel Valley residents in the zone July 27.

If voters turn down the program, the committee will be disbanded.

Three of the seven advisory committee members have already announced their intention to run for water district board seats in the November election. They include Nick Lombardo, who was selected by Director Al Gawthrop; Pat Bernardi, selected by Chairwoman Nancy McClintock; and Dick Heuer, selected by Director Ed Lee.

Other advisory committee members include Richard Baumhoff, selected by Director William Peters; California-American Water Co. vice president Richard Sullivan, selected by Director William Woodworth; and Robert Greenwood, selected by Director Alexander Henson.

Lombardo is a Carmel Valley resident and president of Rancho Canada Golf and Country Club. Heuer and Mrs. Bernardi are members of the citizen environmental group, Carmel River Watch. Baumhoff is an Hacienda Carmel resident and Greenwood is a Carmel Valley geologist and a director of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

Carmel Valley nurseryman Robert Zobel was selected by Jerry Fry. But Fry lost his seat on the water district board of directors when he lost the Monterey mayoral election May 10.

The Mayor's Select Committee, composed of Monterey County mayors, is scheduled to meet May 20 to select Fry's replacement on the water district board.

Decision on federal disaster grant for Carmel Beach expected by June 1

A DETERMINATION of whether Carmel is eligible for a federal disaster relief grant to repair Carmel Beach is expected by June 1.

"It would be safe to say" that a decision will be announced by June 1, according to Mel Schneider, a Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) public assistance officer at Hamilton Air Force Base in Marin County.

The federal office in Marin County is processing the Carmel application.

Announcement of whether Carmel could receive federal aid was originally scheduled to be made by May 1, but FEMA has been swamped with 512 applications, according to Roy Gorup, public assistance officer with the regional headquarters in San Francisco.

If the application is accepted, as much as $311,250 in federal funds could be awarded to the city to repair the beach damage caused by the winter storms.

Grants are awarded on a "75-25 percent" basis, which means the city will have to pay approximately $103,750 of the estimated $415,000 beach repair bill.

FEMA officials can grant partial applications. They could disallow several claims and award the city fewer funds, Gorup pointed out. But Carmel officials shouldn't worry that aid to earthquake-devastated Coalinga will siphon off all available funds, FEMA Public Information Officer Paul Mullane told the Pine Cone/Outlook May 12.

"There's no relationship. The funds that are in the president's contingency fund are established each year in the budget. If there is need for more, the White House will go to Congress," Mullane said.

"It's not like there's a fixed amount and when the money runs out we don't give any more," he continued. "If it runs out, you just go to the well for more."

A separate FEMA agency in Washington State is reviewing the Coalinga emergency, Schneider pointed out.

"It's completely separate. It will not affect Carmel at all," he said.

President Reagan declared Monterey County a disaster area in February. The declaration was necessary so cities and local districts could apply for the federal disaster aid grants.

Carmel Beach was devastated by a series of winter storms. All but two access stairways was demolished. The combination of high tides and winds eroded beach banks and toppled trees.

WE NEED YOUR HELP...

To preserve the integrity of the planning process in Monterey County

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn. has filed a lawsuit to halt the development of a resort hotel at Carmel Valley Ranch until the County and the Water Management District comply with the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act.

The Board of Directors of CVPOA decided to take this action only after long and careful consideration because it felt the time had come to take steps to preserve the integrity of the planning process.

The Board of Supervisors has repeatedly ignored the wishes of the majority of people in Carmel and Carmel Valley that they are supposed to represent. While the CVPOA Board would have preferred avoiding confrontation, it felt there was no other course than to seek assistance from the courts to make the County obey the law.

The City of Carmel, which has successfully pursued several lawsuits against the County on similar grounds, and the Carmel Area Coalition agreed to join in the suit. Carmel had earlier sued the County over its failure to prepare an Environmental Impact Report for the Carmel Valley Master Plan. The suit was brought — as is the case with our suit — when it became obvious that it was the only way to make the County comply with the law.

Superior Court Judge Richard Silver, in ruling against the County, and in requiring the current moratorium on development in Carmel Valley, said the County "abused its discretion" by failing to provide the EIR.

The Master Plan Advisory Committee is in the process of recommending changes in the CV Master Plan in light of the new information in the EIR. It is our contention that the remainder of the Carmel Valley Ranch development should be brought into the Master Plan process to compete with other proposed developments for approval.

Our suit also asks the court to set aside the M.P. Water Management District's recommendation that the Cal-Am service area be extended to include the hotel site.

The Board has retained the well-known environmental law firm of Shute, Mihaly and Weinberger to represent the CVPOA. As you know, such suits are costly. But, can anyone place a price tag on protection of the environment and quality of life on the Monterey Peninsula?

The purpose of the CVPOA is to "Preserve, protect and defend the natural beauty and resources of Carmel Valley ..." Please help us fulfill those aims.

In order to carry this lawsuit to a successful conclusion, we have set up a special Legal Defense Fund and are asking the community to supplement our own limited resources. Please fill out the form below and send us your check or pledge today.

Facts about the Carmel Valley Ranch development and why CVPOA decided to sue:

Since the inception of the Carmel Valley Ranch project in 1974, CVPOA has represented Valley residents at numerous public hearings in the effort to ensure that this major development will not overwhelm or pre-empt the traditional quality of life in Carmel Valley, nor consume a disproportionate share of scarce resources. Even before the drought of 1976-77, a water shortage in Carmel Valley and on the Monterey Peninsula had been foreseen. However, the Environmental Impact Statement of Carmel Valley Ranch (1975) based that project on development of a local source of underground water, the "Tularcitos Aquifer," which would be independent of both Cal-Am and the Valley aquifer.

The Amended Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch (1976) envisages 400 (possibly 500) residential units, a golf-course, golf club, tennis facilities, and a 100-unit hotel complex, all these to be developed in several phases over a period of years. Only those portions on or near the Valley floor lie within the Cal-Am service area. No environmental findings were ever made to modify the 1975 EIR with respect to water supply, yet the County Supervisors re-interpreted the Specific Plan to allow utilization of Cal-Am water as an alternative to the "Tularcitos Aquifer," despite public protests to the contrary.

Nonetheless, a general prohibition, by the Public Utilities Commission, still restrains (under certain conditions) extension of the Cal-Am service area anywhere on the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel Valley.

During the hearings on the Specific Plan, the community was assured by then-Supervisor Sam Farr that the Specific Plan -- if it were approved -- would not be "set in concrete" and that it could be changed to meet the requirements of the new Master Plan.

Later, in 1978, when the Carmel Valley Master Plan was being formulated, then-planning commissioner Bill Peters, insisted that the Carmel Valley Ranch Amended Specific Plan had to be included within it as a fait accompli, not to be tampered with.

Subsequently, the Courts ruled that an EIR on the Master Plan should have been prepared. Accordingly, an EIR was prepared, and after much public input and discussion it was certified in June, 1982. In the light of information provided by the EIR, a Citizens' Committee and County Staff are now revising and updating the original Carmel Valley Master Plan.

A number of factors now constrain possible developments in the Valley, besides the environmental impacts (traffic, etc.) which the EIR points out. These factors include the revised (1982) County General Plan and the Wastewater Study by Montgomery Engineers, but the most confining factor is the limited amount of Cal-Am water allocated to unincorporated areas of the County, including Carmel Valley.

The Board of Supervisors has chosen to divide up the unused portion of that water allocation in such a manner that some 512 lots of record, plus the 400-500 proposed residential units of Carmel Valley Ranch development, will be practically the only non-commercial recipients of water.

We see the Carmel Valley Master Plan as a means for achieving controlled and equitable growth in the Valley, not for awarding most of the available water to a single large development, and especially not Carmel Valley Ranch, which justified itself from the start by undertaking to provide a new source of water.

CVPOA has consistently taken the position that Carmel Valley Ranch, if it wishes to change the ground rules and share in Cal-Am's limited water supply, must come under the provisions of the Master Plan for all phases of the Ranch yet to be developed, including the proposed hotel which lies outside the Cal-Am service area.

We do not agree with the claim made by some supporters of CV Ranch that the project has any "vested right." Furthermore, in granting the Use Permit for the hotel, the Supervisors over-ruled the findings of their own staff, namely that a hotel of more than 60 rooms would be inconsistent with the Specific Plan. They also overruled the recommendation of the County Planning Commission that additional information on water and traffic problems be provided as a condition for approval.

Having exhausted all the channels by which the public may address County Government, CVPOA filed the lawsuit at this time in order to stay within the statute of limitations on the Use Permit. The M.P. Water Management District is included as a party to the suit because, although they have delegated to the County the distribution of water within Cal-Am boundaries, they and the Public Utilities Commission are still responsible for any extension of Cal-Am boundaries.

We have retained an environmental law firm in San Francisco, and plan to pursue the lawsuit until the County agrees to consider the future development of Carmel Valley Ranch on the same footing as other potential developments under the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Pebble Beach asks help from Carmel Sanitary District for revenue

PEBBLE BEACH Community Services District officials have asked the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors for assistance in efforts to obtain state and federal grants for improvements to Pebble Beach pump stations.

The sanitary district is expected to discuss the request when its board of directors meets at 1:30 p.m., May 19 in Carmel City Hall.

The grant would fund work to the pump stations that officials for the Pebble Beach Sanitary District insisted they did not need in 1979, according to Carmel Sanitary District manager Mike Zambory.

Since then, however, the California Water Resources Control Board has directed the Pebble Beach district to attach its grant request to the $6.7 million plant improvement project the Carmel Sanitary District has initiated.

The grant request from Pebble Beach is for $667,000 and would be used to build standby pump stations, according to Michael Zambory, sanitary district manager.

Zambory said he has been told by officials with the state water resources control board that the design phase of the Pebble Beach project may not be eligible for a grant because the Pebble Beach Sanitary District had the chance to include the project in original design schematics for the Carmel Sanitary District project but decided not to do so. Since then, the Pebble Beach Sanitary District was dissolved and sanitary business is conducted by the Pebble Beach Community Services District, which also provides fire protection.

The engineering design work for the project is expected to cost up to $50,000, Zambory said.

If Pebble Beach is able to obtain grants from both the state and the federal governments for the standby pump project, the "local share" would have been about $85,000, he said. But if the Pebble Beach district is stuck with the cost of engineering designs, the local share could increase by another $50,000.

Stan Kawa, manager of the Pebble Beach district, said the district has already spent about $11,500 on engineering studies.

Standby pumps are needed at the seven Pebble Beach pump stations because power outages in the Pebble Beach area result in spilled sewage, according to John Strong, president of the Pebble Beach Community Services District Board of Directors.

Also today, the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors is expected to consider its fee schedule. Zambory said he has recommended no increase in the standard $6 per household fee.

THE BOARD WILL also hear "status reports" on possible federal grant funds for the proposed reclamation project, which would treat sewage to the point that it could be sold to area country clubs to irrigate golf courses.

The sanitary district originally asked for federal and state grants sufficient to fund both the plant improvement project and the reclamation project.

State and federal governments both approved grants for the plant improvement project and the state has approved its grant to fund the reclamation project.

But the EPA has not yet approved funding for the reclamation project and Zambory said three months ago that he expects word from the EPA "any day now."

Late last week, Zambory told the Pine Cone/Outlook: "You may have noticed I haven't said I expect to hear from the EPA 'any day now.'" He did say, however, that he has heard "optimistic reports" from officials at both the federal and state levels about the outcome of the grant request for the reclamation project.

The Carmel Sanitary District has been told by the state water resources control board that it must halt the dumping of secondary sewage into Carmel Bay because the state has classified the bay an "area of special biological significance." The district must stop pouring the sewage into the bay by July 1, 1990.

In response to that order, the district board of directors agreed to initiate plans for the reclamation project.

Run 'quality' schools and close doors, teacher says

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education should operate a quality program until it runs out of money and then simply close the doors until next fall, says Imogene Speiser, president of the Association of Carmel Teachers.

Mrs. Speiser's philosophy is that the financially-ailing district should offer high-quality education for a few months instead of a diluted program over the course of an entire school year.

Trustees will begin full-fledged budget study sessions with a meeting at 7:30 p.m. May 23 and another session tentatively is scheduled for 7 p.m. May 25.

Usually, trustees meet on Tuesday nights but the dates were changed because of the need for additional budget talks. Both meetings will be held in the Carmel Middle School library, Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

'We've agreed that it's the best way to get the attention of the public and the legislature. It's time to wake up Sacramento,' Mrs. Speiser asserted.

Unless the state legislature miraculously provides some type of "bailout" funds, trustees will be forced to trim at least $700,000 out of the proposed $7 million 1983-84 budget.

The state Senate is expected to vote today (May 19) on a major education reform and financial package — SB 813 — jointly sponsored by Senator Gary Hart (D-Santa Barbara) and state Supt. of Public Instruction Louis (Bill) Honig.

If the measure passes, it must still clear the assembly and be signed into law by Gov. George Deukmejian, who so far has opposed any measure that would add new taxes. (See related story, this issue.)

Despite optimism that some form of financial relief is on its way, Carmel school trustees must continue with a series of budget cuts because districts are required to approve a balanced preliminary budget by early June. There is little hope that any kind of state financial assistance measure would be approved by then.

And even if the legislature does approve a major financing package, trustees still face more than $400,000 in deficits caused by a declining enrollment and inflation, said Supt. William Rand.

The answer, according to Mrs. Speiser, is that districts should simply close the schools when the money runs out instead of cutting programs each year.

If enough districts took that drastic step, Sacramento legislators would be forced to provide sufficient funds to public education by parent outcry over school closings, Mrs. Speiser believes.

'If the well runs dry, we should close the schools and then maybe we'll get the attention of Sacramento,' Mrs. Speiser told trustees May 10. "If we keep going that extra mile, we'll never get the attention of Sacramento."

In an interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook, Mrs. Speiser explained her proposal.

"We propose that the administration and professional staff sit down and determine what is a quality program district-wide," she said. "After we determine that, we go with the funds for as many days as that funding will allow."

The drastic step would be a way to attract attention to the funding plight of education.

"We've agreed that it's the best way to get the attention of the public and the legislature. It's time to wake up Sacramento," Mrs. Speiser asserted.

"I hope it will be a wake-up reaction. I hope parents will wake up and say 'no more cuts. We're entitled to a good public education,'" she said.

School district officials must become more politically active as the competition for the tax dollar increases in Sacramento, Mrs. Speiser suggested.

"It's kind of a sad realization of the times. We can't just stand by. We have to become assertive. We have to let parents know that their children and our children, too, are being shortchanged," she said.

There is no more bureaucratic fat to cut. Trustees cannot make additional budget cuts without directly harming the classroom programs, Mrs. Speiser believes.

"I agree that it's time to call a halt to the dismantling of the school system. We're really at a point where there's nothing left to cut," she said. "Teachers keep plugging the holes. Now there's absolutely no place to cut without affecting programs."

Funds for educational programs definitely will have to be trimmed and teachers may have to face cuts in benefits as well to balance the 1983-84 budget, according to a Carmel Unified School District citizens' task force report released May 10.

"We've gotten to a point where some drastic action has to be taken," said committee chairman Pete Salmons of Carmel Valley.

A portion of the report recommends that trustees freeze all increases in staff benefits.

In addition, the board should negotiate a decrease in district contributions for staff benefits from $2,600 to $2,000 annually.

TRUSTEES MUST be willing to take a firm stand against future increases in staff benefits, according to task force member Jim Yates of Carmel Highlands.

"You've got to have the guts to say 'no, no more, this is it' and I'm not sure you've got them," Yates told trustees.

The committee also recommended that the board stop paying teachers who take sabbaticals, which are provided to instructors with at least seven years of service.

Mrs. Speiser is opposed to the staff proposals, and pointed out that sabbaticals are part of a contract signed by teachers when they are hired.

As for the benefits, Mrs. Speiser said teachers have accepted lower pay raises over the past few years to obtain increases in benefits, which include health, life, vision and dental insurance in addition to a retirement plan.

The committee listed its recommendations in three priority lists for either elimination or reduction.

The first priority list included: delay of purchase of school buses ($129,000), elimination of the general fund subsidy to pay for the cafeteria ($10,000), elimination of the deferred maintenance program ($34,507), cutting support of the summer program at the Carmel Valley swimming pool ($3,700), delay of purchase of equipment for the district office ($26,935) and cutting the district contribution to the Gifted and Talented Education (GATE) program ($6,253).

In addition, the committee recommended that trustees study a fee system to offset the home-to-school busing program deficit of $30,000.

Another fee to eliminate the $18,000 athletic transportation deficit is recommended.

Second priority for cuts include elimination of transportation for the split reading program ($15,000), cancel the full-time music teacher position at the middle school ($30,000), reduce the central office secretarial staff by one position ($16,000), and cut the school psychologist's hours by 25 percent ($8,000).

Third priority for cuts included: charge a fee to offset the high school athletic program deficit of $45,500, cut a full-time high school counselor position to half-time ($15,500) and eliminate two half-time secretarial workers at Tulare and River Schools ($12,400).

CVPOA lawsuit fund total reaches $4,600 as campaign continues

THE LEGAL DEFENSE fund for the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association lawsuit against Monterey County and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has ripened considerably.

Since association members were asked to contribute for the first time three weeks ago, more than 150 donors have responded with contributions which total about $4,600, Director Al Eisner announced at the association board of directors meeting May 11.

The association, with the city of Carmel and the Carmel Area Coalition, filed a lawsuit against the county to challenge approval of a use permit granted Carmel Valley Ranch for a 100-unit resort lodge. The suit also names the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District for its decision to annex a portion of Carmel Valley Ranch land to the California-American Water Co. service boundaries.

Also last week, the property owners association board agreed to select Charles Wahle to succeed the late Richard Abbott on the board of directors. Wahle will serve the unexpired term until December, according to Director Richard Nimmons.

Wahle is a retired Army officer and owner of the Old Monterey Book Co. in Monterey.

He was a candidate for the CVPOA board last year and was the leading vote-getter among unsuccessful candidates. It was on that basis that Wahle was selected to fill Abbott's term, said Nimmons, who served on the nominating committee.

Abbott died May 2 after he suffered a heart attack. He was 61.

In other action last week, CVPOA directors agreed to have a general membership meeting sometime in July to discuss the Carmel River management program proposed by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The CVPOA originally planned to discuss the Carmel Valley Master Plan after the master plan advisory committee made its recommendations for the updated plan.

BUT THE MASTER PLAN advisory committee three weeks ago declined the invitation to review the plan with CVPOA because it agreed the plan would be only tentative when it reached the Monterey County Planning Department and because changes from the original plan would be too difficult to explain.

Two CVPOA board members, Mary Ann Matthews and George Greenwood, are also master plan advisory committee members.

So board members instead agreed to discuss the river management plan at their July membership meeting.

No firm date has been set yet, but the meeting will be in Hacienda Carmel. It will be co-sponsored by the citizen environmental group, Carmel River Watch.

Nimmons said the membership meeting will not be open to the "general public" because of limited seating and rules of Hacienda Carmel.

The river management program will be presented to voters along the Carmel River corridor in a special election July 19.

The 10-year program is designed to protect the bed and banks of the Carmel River in an effort to halt erosion along the banks.

Rio Road reconstruction project to cost $300,000

A PLAN to spend more than $300,000 in special state transportation funds on the reconstruction of Rio Road is now before the Carmel City Council.

The proposal is included in the preliminary 1983-84 capital improvements project budget for the city, which was reviewed by the planning commission last night (May 18).

Under state law, the planning commission must determine that the capital improvements project budget is consistent with the city general plan, said Planning Director Robert Griggs. The planning meeting was after the Pine Cone/Outlook deadline.

The city has more than $400,000 available in state transportation funds, which are generated from the state sales tax. Of the 6 cent state sales tax, one-fourth of one cent goes into the city transportation development fund.

The fund is primarily designed to pay for public transportation projects, such as public transit systems, subsidized taxis, and bicycle and pedestrian paths. However, the funds can be used for road projects if the city council determines there are no transportation needs that can not be reasonably met.

'There's been a deterioration of the road and the road base. We've spent thousands and thousands of dollars on the rehabilitation but how can you do patchwork on the surface when there isn't much of a base?' Schmitz asked.

The council is expected to conduct a public hearing on city transportation needs during a June 14 review of the entire city budget, Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz told the Pine Cone/Outlook May 13.

Schmitz supports use of the transportation funds for the Rio Road reconstruction project, which would basically rebuild the street near Carmel Mission from Santa Lucia Avenue to Atherton Drive.

"There's been a deterioration of the road and the road base. We've spent thousands and thousands of dollars on the rehabilitation but how can you do patchwork on the surface when there isn't much of a base?" Schmitz asked.

Damage to the road is attributed to increased vehicular use caused by development at the mouth of Carmel Valley, Schmitz said.

In addition, heavy trucks from the south constantly use the road, and tour buses on their way to the historic Carmel Mission also cause wear and tear on the road.

Heavy rains have taken a toll on the road. Storm runoffs erode the road base because drainage is inadequate, Schmitz pointed out.

Specific plans for the reconstruction project are now being developed by city engineer Clayton Neill.

Work on the project would not begin until September, which is after the major tourist season, Schmitz said.

THE CITY also plans to spend an additional $60,000 of the state transportation funds to finance a storm drainage system on Mission Street between Ocean and Fourth avenues, according to the preliminary capital improvements project budget presented to the planning commission.

Another $20,000 has been earmarked for a potential revival of the subsidized taxi program for senior citizens.

The remaining $22,000 is the city's mandatory contribution to Monterey-Salinas Transit and the county van transportation "RIDES" program for the elderly and handicapped.

There are also five other major projects listed in the preliminary budget.

The city plans to allocate $390,000 for the construction of a 20-space underground parking facility and public restrooms in conjunction with the planned Harrison Memorial Library annex, northwest corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street.

The parking facility will be financed through approximately $350,000 of "in lieu" parking funds. That fund is generated by new or expanding businesses that cannot provide the number of parking spaces required by the city.

The public restrooms will cost the city approximately $40,000.

Another $75,000 for landscaping of the controversial proposed Piccadilly Park is listed in the preliminary capital improvements project budget. The park would be developed on a city-owned vacant lot on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The council on June 21 will decide whether voluntarily to place the disposition of the park before the electorate.

Another $415,000 is set aside for repair of Carmel Beach that was damaged during a series of devastating winter storms. There is a chance that the federal government will pay for 75 percent of the cost.

Also included in the budget is $112,500 to remove or trim about 50 eucalyptus trees throughout the city.

The smallest project in terms of dollars is the proposed installation of safety handrails on the stairs near the Sunset Center patio. The funds will also pay for new safety handrails at the Boy Scout house on the Sunset Center site.

City Administrator Schmitz pointed out that there are few capital improvement projects planned for 1983-84 because of the dollar costs of several of the proposals.

The 1982-83 budget listed 28 different projects at a cost of more than $1 million.

The six projects in the proposed 1983-84 budget would cost the city more than $1.2 million, unless a federal grant is obtained for the beach restoration program.

Spirits soar in Big Sur as Highway 1 reopens

By JOE LIVERNOIS

IT WAS ALMOST business as unusual in Big Sur last weekend as merchants reported the numbers of visitors was an encouraging indication for summer success.

Highway 1 from Carmel to Big Sur opened last Thursday (May 12) after landslides closed the only auto path through the rugged coastline about 10 weeks ago. The highway opened with ribbon-cutting revelry that attracted newspaper, radio and television coverage.

The word is out: Big Sur is open again.

But would the masses show up to extend the celebration through the weekend?

"Well, everything was just how it was," said Tracy Smith, the desk clerk at Ventana Inn.

Her boss, Ventana owner Bob Bussinger, had predicted weeks ago that Ventana would be booked solid the first weekend after the road opened and he was right. In fact, he was so undaunted that he went ahead with his vacation. The last anyone heard from Bussinger, he was in Greece, according to Randy Smith, Ventana manager.

The weather, in fact, cooperated to the fullest. That was an encouraging switch. The sun shined all weekend long, even while overcast palled the Monterey Peninsula Saturday.

Over at the River Inn, the parking lots were full of cars and the riverside lawn was jammed with people Sunday afternoon.

The river was up, the lawn was high enough to make lounging comfortable and local jazz legend Jake Stock was in his element with his Abalone Stompers.

Down the road at Ripplewood Sunday, Forrest Childs at Glen Oaks Restaurant found himself "surprisingly busy." In fact, he ran out of food late Sunday, even though a 1.5-hour power outage kept his stoves idle early Sunday evening.

Earlier in the day, he kept a full house happy with Sunday brunch, in which all the customers — except one couple — were from the Carmel area, he said.

The highway is still closed about two miles south of Gary Koeppel's Coast Gallery. But

HUNDREDS OF VISITORS stopped to enjoy the sun, refreshments and music at the River Inn two miles south of Andrew Molera State Park in Big Sur as Highway 1 opened to out-of-towners for the first time in about 10 weeks.

that did not stop Koeppel from having an "extremely encouraging weekend."

HE SAID MOST of the visitors who came to Big Sur last weekend drove "all the way down to the barricades." And some of them stopped at the gallery.

The two landslides south of the gallery, one at the Sycamore Canyon Draw and the other at Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park, are not expected to be removed and the roadway probably won't open for another two months.

As a result, loss of northbound traffic through Big Sur will continue to have an impact on the area for the next two months, he said.

Koeppel is the president of the Big Sur Chamber of Commerce, an organization that re-forms each time a natural catastrophe — and the resulting media exposure — threaten business in the area.

"The traffic that comes up through Hearst Castle is significant," he said.

But even with no traffic from the south, "the weekend was better than expected," Koeppel told the Pine Cone/Outlook Monday morning. "And this is a very crucial period for us."

"We had the whole cross-section of travelers, the normal traveling public," he said. He said that about 50 percent of the visitors to his gallery during the weekend were "in-state Californians."

Back at Ventana, Randy Smith said his business "had a great weekend. We're still suffering the consequences of not having through traffic in our restaurant and that will be a major factor this summer."

"But the road is open and it is safer and wider and smoother than it was before. I never expected the highway so quickly."

Ask any Big Sur resident what he thinks of the California Transportation Department and its employees and you are likely to hear tons of wonderful platitudes.

"My hat goes off to Cal-Trans for getting it open as quickly as it did," said Smith. "They really deserve a lot of credit. When I first saw portions of the highway when the landslide first hit, I thought it would be an impossible task."

IN A MATTER of 10 weeks, Cal-Trans was able to clear several landslides off the roadway on some sites. In other places, it had to recreate roadways that had dropped seemingly from the face of the earth.

One man was killed south of Big Sur when the bulldozer he was driving plunged over a cliff last month.

The highway workers were honored late last month in a chamber of commerce-sponsored party at Nepenthe, where they were treated to Ambrosia burgers and an open bar.

On Sunday, Holly Fassett and Gilbert Fulton at Nepenthe again served paying customers who had a clear and splendid view of the coastline south of the restaurant.

Down the hill, Robin and Bob Wilson were adequately busy at Cafe Amphora.

"It was so great," said Ms. Fassett. "It was gangbusters. I didn't expect we'd do this well."

"And the nice thing about it was that the customers are as happy as we are. Everyone wished us good luck and told us they hope we are able to recover our losses for the time we were closed."

"That's nice, because we have always felt very personally towards sharing our place here to the public."

"It's great to be back at work," said Andrew Clarke, Sunday's host at Nepenthe. "For a month or two, it was not so bad. But after a while, one starts to get anxious."

Ms. Fassett and other Big Sur merchants told the Pine Cone/Outlook they are "interested" to see if the "surprising" turnout last week can be sustained through the summer. "The publicity from the grand opening was certainly helpful," said Koeppel at Coast Gallery. "Now we've got to see how it goes from here."

Childs said he is optimistic that this summer will be as busy as ever in Big Sur because fewer tourists are likely to show up, which will give Monterey Peninsula residents an opportunity to "enjoy" Big Sur.

"I think that this year people will be coming to Big Sur just to be here," he said. "Few people will be just passing through. People who come here this year will come here to get away from it all."

YOU KNOW, THERE are no telephones here. There is no television. It's a great place to get away from the hustle and bustle for a few days.

Koeppel agrees that Big Sur has much to offer, including its mystical solitude and its wild, open presence, that helped take the sting out of two months without paying customers.

"Big Sur has an incredible lure to people," Koeppel said.

And that is something Big Sur merchants can always bank on.

THE FIRST WEEKEND of business in Big Sur since Highway 1 reopened last Thursday was "gangbusters" at Nepenthe, one and one-half miles south of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, according to owner Holly Fassett. The highway was closed north of Big Sur for about 10 weeks after landslides fell atop the highway at several sites. The highway is still closed south of Big Sur, however, and some Big Sur merchants worry that the loss of northbound traffic will curtail a big summer season. (Photographs by Joe Livernois.)

Carmel school officials plead for more funding signed into law by Gov. George Deukmejian, who has opposed the plan because it creates new taxes and raises others.

The fate of the measure is of extreme importance to the financially-strapped and student-short Carmel Unified School District, which faces an estimated $700,000 deficit in the 1983-84 fiscal year.

The bill would provide enough funding for the state to reinstitute what is called the "102 percent" guarantee. The 102 percent guarantee means that a district with declining enrollment, such as the Carmel district, would receive 2 percent more in state funding than the previous year despite a drop in enrollment.

The basic state funding formula for education is based on "average daily attendance," or ADA. Carmel receives $1,918 for each of its estimated approximately 2,200 ADA.

IF THE 102 percent guarantee is restored, it would provide an additional $368,000 to the Carmel Unified School District, said Business Manager Robert Zampatti.

Another more limited proposal would only give districts a 100 percent guarantee, or exactly the same amount of state funding as was granted in 1982-83.

The 100 percent guarantee would provide $270,000 more than the district would receive if the state based its funding solely on the ADA figures, Zampatti added.

A hint of the association's potential impact may be forthcoming with the outcome of today's vote on the Hart-Honig educational reform and financing package.

Before the May 9 statewide planning session, founders of the Small School Districts'

STATE SUPT. Louis (Bill) Honig told representatives of small school districts that teachers will support his education reform and financing package. "I don't think they can afford not to. They can't put themselves in a corner against the whole state of California," he said. (Michael Gardner photos.)

Association hired a powerful ally in lobbyist Jim Murdoch, who served for nearly two decades as the chief consultant to the California Assembly Education Committee.

By joining the association, Carmel has Murdoch at their disposal for more than just lobbying. He will also keep them abreast of the latest developments in education legislation and inform them whom to contact when key laws are up for a vote.

It was out of financial necessity that several superintendents of small school districts in February first proposed a statewide organization, according to Dave Evans, a Carmel resident who is superintendent of the San Juan Joint Union School District and also the North San Benito County School District.

"It was basically the generally poor financial condition of small school districts since Prop. 13. We've just had it tough," he told the Pine Cone/Outlook recently.

"We have to go out there and explain what our needs are," said Evans, who has been selected to serve as president of the new organization.

Large school districts such as those in San Francisco and Los Angeles can afford to hire full-time lobbyists and have so far been able to push through favorable legislation because of personal face-to-face meetings in legislative offices, Evans said.

"Small schools can't afford to be up there all of the time. Many of the small districts in the association have superintendents who are also principals and bus drivers," he explained.

IT WAS for that very reason that Carmel school board President Ken White, Trustee Doyle Clayton and Supt. William Rand journeyed to Sacramento to participate in the association statewide planning meeting on May 9.

While at the capitol, the trio also lobbied local legislators and sat in on a senate finance committee hearing on the Hart-Honig measure.

All three said the day-long trip proved to be invaluable in terms of making them aware of the goals of the Small School Boards' Association, allowing them the chance to lobby and also actually seeing how the legislative process works.

"It opened our eyes. Here we are a small district going along with the status quo because we think the people (Sacramento) are looking out for us and then we realize things are out of place," White said.

"The big districts, because they can afford lobbyists, have been very effective in getting special interest legislation passed," he added.

The lobbyist hired by the association will also be able to inform the small districts when pertinent legislation is working its way through the myriad of legislative committees and hearings, White believes.

In addition, the association will serve as a sounding board for small districts with similar problems, he pointed out.

"It's a situation where I think it's important for communication. We'll be able to talk to like districts with the same problems and learn from each other how to handle similar problems," White said.

"We added to the groundswell feeling that this is the year we need to do something," he said. "I think it was important that we showed them that we care enough to go there personally. It's one thing to write letters, but I think we were more effective sitting right in their office."

'There's no doubt that the issue up here is education, education financing, education reform. It's all part of one package,' Farr said. 'The issue really comes down to one of money.'

The trip also provided school officials with the opportunity to personally lobby local lawmakers.

The trip also helped dismiss fears of lobbying, White added.

"It opened our eyes to the process. I find that now anybody in the school district should not be afraid to go to Sacramento and shout and jump up and down and let them know we're here," he said.

Clayton agreed: "The personal contact definitely had much more of an impact than writing a letter," he said.

Small districts must begin to realize that the complacency of the pre-Prop. 13 era must end, Clayton believes.

'BACK IN the days before Prop. 13, there was a lot of money. We got our share and we were happy," Clayton explained. "Now we have to go out there and get it." "We left there much more knowledgeable about the legislative process, how to impact our legislators and the need for the public to let the legislature and the governor know about the need for adequate school funding," Rand said.

Carmel school officials planned the May 10 trip to Sacramento around the Small School Districts' Association conference and the senate finance committee hearing on the Hart-Honig proposal.

Keynote speaker at the SSDA meeting was state Supt. of Public Instruction Louis "Bill" Honig, who told school officials that Governor Deukmejian is the roadblock to passage of a major education reform and financing measure.

THE EXPRESSION on board President Ken White's face (center) perhaps sums up the dilemmas faced by small school districts statewide — more demands for services with

"If we could just get a signal from the governor's office to go to it, it would pass in a second," Honig said.

Senate Republicans are hesitant to support any measure that will raise taxes because Deukmejian was elected on a platform promise not to raise taxes, Honig believes.

If the senate overrides a veto, it would be a major "embarrassment" for Deukmejian, which is exactly what the Republicans want to avoid, Honig added.

The Hart-Honig bill basically raises $700 million for education through a variety of tax increases and new taxes.

A major provision of the bill would increase the state sales tax by one-quarter of 1 percent. The sales tax is now 6 percent on the dollar.

The measure would also repeal the current sales tax exemption on candy and gum.

Also, the measure would double most liquor taxes, add a 5 percent surcharge on most bank and corporations that have net profits of $10 million or more, and double the tax on a pack of cigarettes from 10 to 20 cents.

In addition, the measure includes major educational reforms.

Under the proposal, trustees could more easily fire incompetent teachers, are exempt from seniority hiring lists and could fail or expel habitual student troublemakers and truants.

School days and the school year would also be lengthened and stricter graduation requirements adopted, under provisions in the Hart-Honig measure.

Currently, the Carmel school year is 175 days. Students would have to attend 180 days under the bill.

The Carmel High School graduation requirements already meet those proposed in the bill.

HONIG BELIEVES "momentum" is building to approve his proposals.

"The tide is turning right now in our favor as far as momentum is concerned," he said. "I don't think the governor has fathomed the support we have."

"They can't say that this is just school people wanting more money. This is our economy, our democracy and our education," Honig said.

The time to push through education financing and reform is now, he insisted.

"Our argument is that it can't wait. We will win the battle to reform education for the next three to four years this year," he told the school officials.

Honig's message was earlier echoed by the first speaker, Bill Whiteneck, chief consultant to the senate education committee.

"The most important principle this year is whether the governor is going to sign the bill," said Whiteneck, who spent most of his talk explaining the Hart-Honig proposal.

Whiteneck supports formation of the Small School Districts' Association. He said small districts need to organize to get their "fair share."

He called lobbying by educators a "recent phenomenon" and said that large districts are well-organized and can afford to spend the funds to have their presence felt in Sacramento.

"Their advocate in Sacramento has been able to influence a lot of legislators," Whiteneck said. "It's a very organized job on their part."

After lunch, White and Clayton left the association meeting to do a little lobbying of their own over in the newly-renovated capitol building. Rand stayed behind to listen to a third speaker and meet with other superintendents.

First stop on the agenda was a meeting with Assemblyman Sam Farr of Carmel (D-28th), who is an enthusiastic supporter of the Hart-Honig bill.

"There's no doubt that the issue up here is education, education financing, education reform. It's all part of one package," Farr said. "The issue really comes down to one of money."

Farr is pessimistic that backers of the Hart-Honig plan will be able to win over to their side many Republicans unless Gov. Deukmejian denounces his opposition to SB 813.

"Maybe one or two will peel off, but we won't get enough to block the governor's veto," Farr said. "I think the decision is with the governor. The governor is the key to this."

AFTER THEIR brief session with Farr, White and Clayton left notes for Assemblyman Eric Seastrand of Salinas (R-29th), who is considered a key "swing" vote on the Hart-Honig proposal. Seastrand was in committee hearings when Clayton and White stopped in.

Seastrand's office in King City told the Pine Cone/Outlook May 16 that the assemblyman has not taken a position on the measure.

Although state Senator Henry Mello of Watsonville (D-17th) was unavailable, White and Clayton were able to meet with his administrative assistant, Carol Ross.

Mello, a long-time opponent of tax increases, has relented and will support the Hart-Honig bill when he casts his vote today, Ross told the Carmel school officials.

"Education is so important that he's willing to take a little heat," Ms. Ross explained.

The public must make an enormous outcry before Governor Deukmejian will sign any measure that increases taxes, she said.

"The difficulty is in the governor," Ms. Ross pointed out. "It's really going to take a big public demand."

After the lobbying, Clayton and White rejoined Rand and sat in on the education finance committee's hearing on the Hart-Honig bill.

The measure was sent to the full senate on a 9-1 vote with Fresno Assemblyman Ken Maddy (R-14th) dissenting. Under the new reapportionment program, Maddy's district will include Carmel Valley and Big Sur beginning with the 1984 elections.

BILL WHITENECK, consultant to the state senate education committee, told representatives of small school districts, including Carmel, that the key to passage of taxes to finance educational reform lies with Gov. George Deukmejian.

Business BeatBusinesses must apply for license

By FLORENCE MASON

THE BUSINESS License and Code Review Board wants owners of new businesses in Carmel (and new owners of old businesses) to know that they have to come in and apply for a business license.

Sandy Swain, planning commission chairwoman and a member of the business license board, made the suggestion that the city restore its earlier practice of sending letters to anyone who is either starting up a new business in the city or buying an already existing one, to advise them of the steps they must take in order to function legitimately. Planning Director Bob Griggs concurred: "It takes time, but we should do it." The rest of the board members agreed.

The consensus was that many people are just not aware of the need. Asst. Fire Chief Vern Allred pointed out, however, that any business owner who does not have a current license in his or her own name operates in violation of city laws.

WHAT'S THE USAAF DOING HERE?

Robert Barnhart didn't need to come before the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board, but he chose to. "I want to let the people in Carmel know who the United States Amateur Athletic Foundation is, what we're doing."

Barnhart, regional manager for the USAAF, also wanted city officials to know that the non-profit organization will promote financial support for outstanding amateur athletes by house-to-house, telephone and mail-out solicitations.

"Communist-bloc countries fund their athletes, but we don't. Athletes who have the potential of representing the United States in international and/or Olympic competition need our help," he said.

Barnhart, a Carmel resident who runs the gym that is a cooperative effort of the school district and the city of Carmel, said promotions will begin this month and will continue "indefinitely."

"Our long-range goal is to establish some training programs for Olympic athletes in Monterey County," he said. He will look for outstanding athletes in this area, too.

The board's only concern was with the house-to-house solicitation of funds. Barnhart assured the board that all solicitors will have personal identification and an official packet of USAAF materials. In addition, the names of all the solicitors will be listed with the Carmel Police Department for reference in case of inquiries.

The board also asked for definition of the organization's plans for "ongoing" solicitation. Barnhart said there would be one drive, "possibly repeated, at my discretion." He added: "If we get an objection, we will adjust." He commented that the board's point about avoiding frequent or repeated house-to-house solicitation was "well-taken."

ANOTHER ANNIVERSARY

Heinz Fanderl and his wife, Inge, are in their eighth year with The Swiss Tavern. Upstairs in Su Vecino Court between Dolores and Lincoln Streets, this dinner-only restaurant is a special favorite of localites. It's somewhat off-the-beaten-track location means that residents know where it is, but visitors may have to find it.

Heinz, who is chef, and Inge, who is hostess and waitress, have offered "pretty much the same menu" for the past seven years, in an atmosphere truly reminiscent of their native Switzerland. They specialize in veal dishes and in fondues — beef, cheese and chocolate.

The couple came to the peninsula in 1970 and for five years, Heinz was the chef at the Beach Club in Pebble Beach. "Then came the opportunity to buy this in 1975, and we certainly took it," he said. He has always been active in the Monterey

The Fanderls have two children with them in their South Carmel Hills home: Mark, who is 10 and a student at River School, and Jeannette, 12, who goes to Carmel Middle School. As a family they love skiing in the winter and the beach "and everything else that's here" the rest of the year.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE BANK OF CARMEL

Shareholders of the National Bank of Carmel received welcome news at their May 10 meeting: in the first quarter of 1983, assets of the bank increased 112 percent over the corresponding date last year ($32,432,000 as of March 31, 1983 compared with $15,259,000 in 1982).

Donald Nelson, president and chief executive officer, reported stockholders' equity climbed from $3,430,000 in 1982 to a new high of $3,784,000. The loan portfolio increased 369 percent above the similar date last year.

For the quarter ended March 31, net earnings were $45,119, or 27 cents per share in 1982. For the same period this year the figures were $61,000, or 38 cents per share.

Nelson attributed the growth to "the monitoring and selection of vehicles that will produce a benefit for the community and the bank."

"Our ongoing commitment to provide financing to the Monterey Peninsula kept lending activities at an accelerated pace during the first quarter (of 1983). Our asset growth has allowed us to continue in a strong position to serve the needs of the local customer. Our desire is to keep growing in a controlled, orderly manner."

In further news at the National Bank of Carmel, Loan Administrator Richard Fritz announced that Earl Martine has joined the bank as vice president, mortgage loans.

"Mr. Martine's association represents an expansion of the bank's services in the mortgage banking area," Fritz said. The appointment follows the recent formation of the bank holding company as "a step toward providing additional services," he said.

Martine had his own company in Los Altos for several years and then for the last year he worked for SCM Mortgage Corp., as regional manager in Los Angeles. "The family wanted to get back up here," he said, pleasing them as well as himself by this move. Earl and Joan Martine have a daughter, Megan, 6, and a son, John, who is five.

Earl Martine went to school at the University of Tennessee, although he was raised in Connecticut ("I'm the only maverick — the rest are still back there") and now he is right where he wants to be. He finds plenty of opportunity not far away for his favorite avocations: snow skiing, back-packing and tennis.

told me. "Rag rugs are sort of 'nice twice' articles. They also make conversation pieces in that one can point to 'these strips that came from my sister-in-law's winter coat, those are from my husband's pants and here are my late living room curtains!'"

"It makes me feel so good that I can create something out of 'nothing.' And people have fun when they discover remnants of their sewing projects in them."

All of the rugs are lined, Anita pointed out, so they always lie flat. Her method of using discarded fabrics and weaving them into rag rugs was commonly used during America's pioneer days. The Rya rugs, on the other hand, involve a method of knot weaving that dates back to Viking times.

Ms. Seckel lived in Hawaii after she left Switzerland and before she came to the United States. There, as a member of the Hawaii Handweavers Hui, she learned to weave and to create unusual wall hangings with a variety of the many plant fibers available from the exotic trees in the Foster Botanical Gardens.

Although weaving is her main interest, she also loves to knit, and takes both woodcarving and sewing lessons at the Carmel Foundation.

People interested in Anita Seckel's weavings can still get further information about them through San Francisco Federal, or in the white pages of the phone book.

MARY MAY IS IN BUSINESS

Mary May, who has been a waitress at the Village Corner restaurant almost four years, is still there. And she is also starting up her own business. It has the delightful name of The Walking Wok and it is a catering service she operates from her home in Marina.

It's no secret to her boss at the Village Corner. Mary has told him she will be staying there until her business catches on. In fact, the new business grew out of requests from some of the Village Corner's customers, who asked Mary May to do dinner parties for them.

In setting up her first business enterprise, Mary no doubt had some help from her husband, Terry Bourne, a business counselor already well established in offices above Jack London's (in the Mall on San Carlos Street).

Bourne was in the Army previously, and went to the Defense Language Institute in 1971. Mary explained why they settled here: "My husband traveled a lot; this was the nice place to stay."

Mary came here about seven years ago from Hong Kong. If she has any time left after work as a waitress and developing her own "Walking Wok," she can be found on a tennis court or in a swimming pool.

THE OLYMPICS HAVE COME TO CARMEL

The 1984 Olympic Games are recognized in Carmel. First Interstate Bank celebrated Olympics Day the end of last month and during May, the bank conducts a drawing for the benefit of the Olympics Committee.

If you come to the Lincoln and Ocean office of the bank (through May 31) you can buy a ticket for $2 and take a chance on winning an Olympic pen collector set or individual pens or an Olympic calendar that features game posters all the way back to 1896.

The First Interstate Bank system, active in 12 states, is one of the major sponsors of the Olympic Games, which will take place in Los Angeles in the summer of 1984. That means the parent organization has a commitment to raise several million dollars for the Olympic Committee.

The local celebration, during which all the bank employees dressed as athletes, and the raffle, were developed by the Carmel office manager, Judy Brooke. Ms. Brooke, who became manager in July, 1981, explained that Olympic athletes traditionally trade small pens.

The collection, which represents each of the major Olympic events, is in a case and suitable for framing.

"These collections usually sell for $190," Ms. Brooke said, and $90 goes to the Olympics Committee. The rest is the cost of the pens." She pointed out that the $90 is tax deductible.

Individual pens are also available at $4 each. Ms. Brooke emphasized that there is no benefit to the bank from the raffle or the sale of any Olympics-related items. The bank absorbs all costs involved.

A BETTER QUALITY OF LIFE

"A better quality of life" attracted Sharon Sands to Carmel Valley two years ago. Now, as Carmel Graphics and Advertising Design, she works out of a studio in her home.

Mrs. Sands brings 15 years of experience in a variety of fields — graphic design, art directing, photography and printing among them — to her own company, which she started just six months ago.

Carmel Graphics designs or redesigns logos, business cards and letterheads; designs and prepares camera-ready art for sales campaigns; develops ads for magazines and newspapers; dreams up new calendars or give-away sales items; designs company or personal T-shirts; carries out ideas for posters; and will design books "the way their authors want to present them to a publisher or printer."

Ms. Sands won a number of design awards in New York and Los Angeles before she came to Carmel.

Among her local clients are the newly formed Chamber of Commerce Serving Carmel/Carmel Valley, for whom she designed an application brochure, and The Crossroads shopping center. She has a one-year contract with the latter for all their advertising, which includes ads in Monterey Life and Key magazines as well as in our own Pine Cone and Monterey Peninsula Review.

"A better quality of life" also means a 20-acre ranch for Sharon Sands. "It keeps me pretty busy!" she said, happily.

She has just started her own vineyard with 160 grape cuttings — Chardonnay and Concord. "That's something to look forward to," she said. "In four or five years, we'll see if it works."

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE MOLE HOLE?

The Mole Hole is "tired," owner Michael Heggie said. "It just needs picking up."

"Picking it up" is what has been going on this week at the San Carlos Street store (between Fifth and Sixth avenues).

After two weeks of sales to limit the number of items Heggie and his helpers would have to wrap and store while they refurbish the shop, the Mole Hole is closed this week. When it reopens next week there will be a new floor, a new (and lower) ceiling, matching paneling throughout and new lighting. Manager Lee Grauer, who has been with the gift and home accessories shop more than three years, describes it as "generally cleaning up the act."

We always thought it one of Carmel's most attractive looking shops, but perhaps that is because we didn't look further than the intriguing ceramics, animals, children's items, doormats, pictures and other delightful offerings. Mike and Lee must know what they are talking about. We'll go by to check out the results of their efforts.

The Conscience of Carmel

Carmel tradition in the theater

By GUNNAR NORBERG

IT'S NOW 73 years since the first world premiere of an original play was presented in Carmel and there have been many here since that first one.

Next September there may be still another, and its title is Two for the Show, the play which has just won this year's $2,000 award in the annual contest sponsored by the city of Carmel. The playwright is Marvin Rosenberg, who teaches at the University of California, and whose contest entry topped a field of 175 new plays considered for the award.

This year's award is the sixth in the annual series which began in 1977, and which continues the tradition in theater begun in 1910 when Constance Lindsay Skinner's David was given its premiere production at Carmel's then-new outdoor Forest Theater.

The man who played the title role in David was a professional actor, Herbert Heron, who later directed plays and wrote plays, and who also served as mayor of Carmel in the 1930s. He is remembered as the founder of the Forest Theater which has been identified as the first outdoor community theater in California. It is owned by the city of Carmel, and came to the city as a gift.

The next world premiere of an original play, written by an author who became nationally renowned, was Fire by Mary Austin, about whom a new book has been published. The book's author is Augusta Fink.

Many other premieres here followed. One was The Sons of Spain, authored by Sidney Howard, who later won the Pulitzer Prize for a play still being seen around the country, They Knew What They Wanted.

Then there was the premiere in the Forest Theater of another Mary Austin play, The Arrowmaker. And soon after there was a verse play by Jack London called The First Poet, and Jack London himself was a member of the Carmel group which produced it. Another play-in-verse was Yolanda of Cyprus, which later was turned into an opera and had its premiere in Chicago in that form.

Herbert Heron and John Northern Hilliard co-authored a play titled Tusitala which premiered here, and which dealt with the life and career of Robert Louis Stevenson, who had lived in this area briefly before he settled down in Samoa in the South Seas.

In the 1920s two children's plays, The Inchling and Mr. Bunt, written by Carmelite Ira Remson, made a great hit with audiences when they opened at the Forest Theater, and were repeated there many times through the years.

In the mid-1930s, there was an aspiring playwright whose first play, Glory Lane, was first seen here. It was directed by actor-director-producer, Byington Ford, who then owned what is now today as Carmel's first real estate organization, the Carmel Realty Company. Sometime early in the 1970s, the author of Glory Lane, John Patrick, dropped in at my travel office, and we had a long talk about theater in Carmel and about how important it was to Carmel and to the world that there should be a place such as Carmel where for so many years there had been real effort made to help and encourage aspiring playwrights in their attempts to achieve public recognition.

We talked about the idea of some kind of annual contest in which a winner would not only get a monetary award but would also be given a first production of his winning play. It was at that time that I began to propose what is now the City's Festival of Firsts, and which continues to provide the kind of encouragement and the kind of initial recognition which able new playwrights must get if they are going to have a chance to achieve their goals.

By the time John Patrick and I talked about the theater, its past here and its possible future, he had himself become a famous playwright, and in the process had won a Pulitzer Prize for a World War II-connected play which many readers may have seen and enjoyed, The Teahouse of the August Moon.

PROBABLY the most talked about and the best remembered world premiere of a new play at Carmel's Forest Theater, was that of Tower Beyond Tragedy, done in 1941. The play was written by Carmel's famous poet-playwright, Robinson Jeffers.

The leading actress in the play was Judith Anderson, who later was knighted and became known as Dame Judith Anderson. It was not until 1949 that Tower Beyond Tragedy opened on Broadway, and again the star was Judith Anderson.

The producer of the play here in 1941 was Blackie O'Neal, the father and grandfather of two of today's Hollywood film stars — Ryan O'Neal and Tatum O'Neal. And one of the backstage hands at the premiere here also became a motion picture star — the late Richard Boone.

The first American winner-to-be of the Nobel Prize in Literature, Sinclair Lewis, was also here in the time of Carmel's early theater beginnings and shared a cottage near the present Golden Bough Theater with William Rose Benet. At the time of his last visit here in 1933, he was interviewed by Herb Cerwin, who quoted him in the Pine Cone. Said Lewis: "Somehow, strangely enough, Carmel has survived and retained much of the atmosphere that made it famous in the days when I first lived here."

This is the kind of atmosphere which I've done everything in my power to try to maintain and perpetuate. For example, in the early 1970s, when the city council was thinking about selling the Forest Theater just to get funds to buy a corporation yard, or to convert the Forest Theater to a corporation yard, I helped to revive the Forest Theater Guild and I produced three Shakespeare plays there: Twelfth Night, Much Ado About Nothing, and Richard III, — which succeeded in discouraging any further thought of selling or converting the Forest Theater.

Next month — June 23 — the play Lion in Winter will open a month's run at the Forest Theater with Kevin LaGriff, Senator Henry Mello's administrative assistant, in the leading role.

However let me now get back to the Festival of Firsts and to some information about preceding years' winners.

Last year's winner was John Liam Joyce, a New Yorker with roots in Ireland. His play was Wintertime and the local cast in the Sunset Center premiere last September was headed by the greatly accomplished local actor, Donald Ross, who had played leading roles in the Shakespeare plays I'd produced in the Forest Theater.

The first Festival of Firsts winner was Elan Garonzik whose play was titled Scenes and Revelations. This play later opened at the Goodman Theater in Chicago and at New York's Circle-on-the-Square. The second winning play was Show Me a Hero by Sally Dixon Wiener. After it won the award here, the play was produced at a theater in New York, and here's what New York Times critic, John Corry, wrote about it:

"Show Me a Hero has some wonderfully constructed characters, and at St. Malachy's, it is being given a wonderfully detailed production. It is a realistic play, and although you may never have been on a wheat farm in northern Colorado, you probably will be persuaded that this is what one is like. Gregory Abels, the director, has put together a first-class production."

And those are a few glimpses at what has happened to a few of Carmel's Festival of Firsts winners' plays, and they must be encouraging to all those Carmelites who have tried to maintain and to perpetuate the Carmel tradition in original theater. (Copyright 1983 Gunnar Norberg.)

Nurses enjoy fashion show

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

Hospitals and white uniforms were forgotten for a few hours last Saturday when the Association of Operating Room Nurses had their annual luncheon/fashion show at the Carmel Holiday Inn.

About 100 AORN members and their friends attended the event, which included a delicious chicken luncheon followed by a fashion show where AORN members modeled the collection of spring fashions provided by Brittany's of The Crossroads. Store manager Louise Hesemeyer was coordinator and commentator.

Lively entertainment was provided by nurses Mary Brooks and Pauline Thomas. Kathy Nathan, a teacher at Gateway Center, also participated in the entertainment.

Chairwoman was Zenia Christensen, R.N., who has worked for the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for more than three years. Zenia was a board member for two years and also has been the fashion show chairwoman for the past two years. She has been a member of AORN since 1964.

Zenia, who has a delightful accent, has lived in France and Germany as well as various parts of the United States. She said that although her work requires that she wear white, she loves colorful clothing and enjoys working with fashion shows.

Mary Brooks, who entertained the audience with her singing of various show tunes, is a nurse who is extremely active away from her regular work. Mary is president of the Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society and recently returned from an entertaining gig aboard the cruise ship Carnival.

She said she enjoys following the jazz jubilees around California and is looking forward to the upcoming jubilee to be held in Sacramento which will feature about 100 bands and, according to Mary, will draw an audience of about 200,000 people from around the world.

RETIREMENT PARTY FOR KAY GOINES

After 28 years of teaching at Carmel River School, Kay Goines has decided to take an early retirement. Kay happily looks forward to some travel as well as spending more time with her husband Larry. Kay, who has traveled all over the world to lecture on children's education and literature, looks forward to more of the same.

Kay was voted California Teacher of the Year (1981-1983). She will be the guest of honor at a retirement party at the Carmel home of Richard and Marcy Murray on Friday, May 27 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. The Murrys are active River School parents and Marcy will be Parent-Faculty Club President next year.

Through the years, Kay has become a very special person to many children and their parents so you can bet that the Murray home will be packed with young and old — all feeling grateful to have known this remarkable woman. Kay will be sorely missed but we wish her well in her new venture.

CARMEL RIVER SCHOOL APPRECIATION PARTY

The Pebble Beach home of James and Joyce Lindgren will be the scene of an appreciation party from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, May 22. The event will be given by the Parent-Faculty Club of Carmel River School to honor all aides and volunteers who have helped to make a successful school year.

About 100 people will attend, including teachers, staff, aides, volunteers, old and new board members and guests.

Refreshments of hors d'oeuvres, desserts, coffee and wine will be served.

JESTERS GOURMET DINNER TO GO TO LUCKY TICKET HOLDER

Just a reminder that Jester members are selling tickets for their annual Jester Gourmet Dinner. The Jesters, a fund-raising auxiliary for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, has various activities yearly to raise funds for the museum.

The annual dinner is a favorite because it means the lucky ticket holder can invite nine friends to partake of the feast which will be served by Jester members Dirk and Car van der Burch, Fran Reid, Peggy Compton and Helen and Gordon Craig.

A brief synopsis of the dinner menu and donors is: hors d'oeuvres and main entree, The Sardine Factory; fish course, The Lodge At Pebble Beach; abalone soup, The Rogue; dessert wines, The Country Store; red and white dinner wines, Neilsen's Wine Cellar; dessert, Triples.

Doesn't that tempt your delicate, discerning pink palates? The drawing to name the lucky winner will be held at the Jesters' June meeting.

PANHELLENIC INITIATION LUNCHEON

Monterey Bay Alumnae Panhellenic members will have their initiation luncheon at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach May 21. The social hour will be at 11:30 a.m. followed by luncheon at 12:30 p.m. There will be a brief business meeting and installation of officers.

Cost of the luncheon is $12. Checks can be sent to J.M. Peacock, Box 3631, Carmel, Calif. 93921. Dues of $6 will be payable at the luncheon.

SCOTTISH SOCIETY GALA ON MAY 22

The lads and lassies of the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula are never at a loss for fun events. Their annual Kirkin' O' the Tartan will be at the Carmel Presbyterian Church (Ocean and Junipero, Carmel) at 3 p.m. Sunday, May 22. Highland dress and Scottish attire are encouraged.

The event is sponsored by the officers and board of governors of the Society. Entertainment chairman is R. Scott Moore. Gordon C. Craig is president of the local club.

RLS SPONSORS CLUB ANNOUNCES GIFT TO THE SCHOOL

Suzanne Hewitt, president of the Robert Louis Stevenson School Sponsors Club, announced that the club will make a gift of $25,000 to the school to fund the capital needs of the academic departments and to purchase new classroom furniture. The gift was the result of an auction chaired by Lorraine Nardone and Jeremy Shackleford.

Grace Johns also announced that $2,000 from the sale of the RLS Cookbook would fund various capital needs of the school.

NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY ... IN AUGUST

Balloons, noise makers, the singing of Auld Lang Syne and the sweet music of the Guy Lombardo Orchestra — it's all part of the New Year's Eve party at the Beach Club Aug. 11.

Why such an unusual party? Because unusual things get the attention and, in this case, the party will benefit the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation.

The events will include a gourmet dinner and a fashion show with Saks Fifth Avenue of New York supplying the clothing which will feature fall fashions and some fabulous holiday costumes.

The event is in the very capable hands of a great committee including Artie Early, chairwoman and Maggie Eastwood, who will handle reservations.

Burney Threadgill is president of the local foundation chapter.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT TO BENEFIT SPCA

Four years ago Don Nyman, owner of Creative Property Investments, and his partner, attorney Lloyd Yost, decided to hold a Nyman Cup Invitational Tennis Tournament at Carmel Valley Ranch.

"It was just sort of a joke," said Don. "We had no idea that it would catch on and become an annual event."

But catch on it did and this year's event will be at Carmel Valley Ranch on May 21. Play begins at 4:30 p.m.

The 20 players (mixed doubles) decided that this year they wanted to do something to help out the community so all proceeds from the event will go to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA).

After the tournament, the players and friends will have a barbecue. The food has been donated and Rancho Liquors will donate beer and wine.

Don, an avid tennis player, recently hurt his back so he will have to forego playing. He won't have time to get bored, since he's been elected to man the barbecues and see that there is an ample supply of piping hot hamburgers and hot dogs.

Some of those who will participate will be Carmel Valley Ranch pro Greg Lehman and Ken Green, who was last year's club champion for the ranch. Defending his win of last year will be Bob Hatcher, an attorney from Seaside.

Other players will include Sylvia Stewart, Julie Nyman, Carl and Diane Cardinali, Mogens Jensen, Ron Sanchirico, Michael and Cassandra Barton and Kathy and Andy Capestro.

Workshop on hearing problems

A free public workshop on hearing problems is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 12 noon in the main conference room of Community Hospital.

Your Ears — Symptoms and Solutions 1983 will be followed by free hearing screenings for interested persons.

The medical aspects of hearing problems and the varieties of treatments available will be discussed by Dr. William S. McAfee and Dr. William H. Falor, Jr., both ear, nose and throat specialists.

Audiologists Katie O'Shaughnessy-Roddy and Terry Bowen will talk about diagnostic testing techniques and basic rehabilitation methods, including speech therapy, lip reading and hearing aids. A variety of hearing aids will be on display. For more information, phone 625-4505.

DOCENT Agnes Nohrberg accepted a cup of tea from Beth Wright at the garden party.

SEATED AT THE foot of Hawk Tower were visitors Samuel and Laura Hurwitz and their seven and one-half month old daughter, Hannah.

Annual Tor House garden party was a smash success Saturday

The overcast sky and nippy weather provided a perfect setting for the annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation garden party at Tor House last Saturday.

About 100 guests toured the house and many climbed the steep stone stairs to the top of Hawk Tower, where they were rewarded with a breathtaking view.

The magnificent Tor House gardens are now in full bloom and the scent of the hundreds of flowers mingles with the scent of wood smoke and sea air. Inside the Tor House dining room, a fire crackled in the huge stone fireplace. Guests warmed themselves while they partook of hot tea and a variety of foods from the long buffet table.

Poet Robinson Jeffers' daughter-in-law, Lee Jeffers, welcomed guests as did Foundation President George White and Nancy Miller, executive director of the Foundation.

Docent Chairwoman Patricia Hunt also greeted guests and docents were available to show guests around and to answer any questions about Tor House, Hawk Tower and the gardens.

All proceeds will go to the Tor House Foundation.

TOR HOUSE Foundation President George White chatted with docent Agnes Nohrberg at the garden party. Hawk Tower is in the background.

DOCENT CHAIRWOMAN Patricia Hunt (right) and party co-chairwoman Ann Borden admired the flowers at Tor House.

Statistics are not a new invention. Prior to 3000 B.C. the Babylonians recorded on small clay tablets tabulations of agricultural yields and of commodities bartered or sold. The ancient Egyptians analyzed the population and material wealth of their country before beginning the building of the pyramids in the 31st century B.C. The Biblical books of Numbers and I Chronicles are largely statistical works. The former contains two separate censuses of the Israelites and the latter describes the material wealth of the tribes.

Carmel Soroptimist Club has a progressive dinner in Pebble Beach

Members of the Carmel Bay Soroptimist Club recently had a progressive dinner. The first stop was at "B.J." Rosetto's condominium in Pebble Beach where the group enjoyed cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. Then it was on to the home of Dr. Jacqueline Richmond, also in Pebble Beach, where guests feasted on a gourmet buffet dinner provided by the members.

Chairwoman for the dinner was Eileen Wright.

The Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay is a newly formed service club on the Monterey Peninsula and this particular get-together was the first informal gathering for the club members.

Antique show and sale draws large crowd at the fairgrounds

A good party is the best way to get any event off and running and that's exactly what happened with the arrival of the Ninth Annual Monterey County Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the Monterey County Unit of United Voluntary Services.

The event is one of the peninsula's largest and most varied antique shows and this year about 80 antique dealers from all over the United States participated.

The show at the Monterey County Fairgrounds May 13-15 was given a grand kickoff last Thursday evening when Helen Langfeld gave her annual pre-show gala for dealers, their spouses and UVS members.

Helen founded UVS on Dec. 9, 1942 just two days after the attack on Pearl Harbor. She has lived at her Pebble Beach home (and another home in Hillsborough) for the past 45 years. She was UVS's first national president and sponsors antique shows throughout the U.S. All proceeds go to various charities.

Helen usually has the party at her home but decided that an alfresco affair on the fairgrounds would be nice this year.

She was unable to attend this year's gala but was represented by her son, Louis Langfeld.

The party started about 5 p.m. and the nice weather was a plus for all the socializing. Rudy Heinz was there to man the full bar and a delicious array of foods covered the long buffet table which was decorated with a huge driftwood log entwined with fresh flowers. After the festivities, most of the dealers continued to work on their exhibits.

The party mood was still going strong on Friday morning when UVS members had their fourth annual Kahlua coffee for dealers and guests. Chairwomen for the coffee was Gail Compton and Ruth Fletcher.

UVS members who welcomed guests to both Helen's party and the coffee included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ragsdale, Helen Spangenberg, Margaret Peebles, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hanna, Mrs. Marge David, Robert and Elizabeth Ferguson, Mrs. Elgie Rhineshart and Mrs. Dorothy Kimmel.

Organizations, projects and programs that the UVS has supported and given service include: Guide Dogs For The Blind, The Monterey Symphony, The Monterey County Braille Transcribers, Hearing Impaired Day Classes (High School), Hearing Impaired Day Classes (Toro School), Monterey County Museum of Art, Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art (Museum on Wheels) and Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

HELPING WITH the food at the progressive dinner were Dr. Jacqueline Richmond (left) and Sidney Slade.

Picnic society has first bash at the Trail and Saddle Club

Both Abraham Lincoln and Thomas Edison have been quoted as saying that answers to problems or special ideas often came when they were sleeping.

Well, you can just bet that Fred and Dee Farr, David and Joan Sailer and Soren and Ingrid Axelson were all wide awake when they came up with the idea to form the American Picnic Society.

After they tossed the idea around for a few hours these nature lovers put their thoughts into action which culminated in the first annual APS picnic May 7 at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

The weather was warm and sunny as about 200 picnic lovers gathered to get the first annual event underway. When it comes to emceeing any type of get-together — from a black tie affair to a picnic — Bud Allen just can't be topped. His good-natured chatter works like magic and this gathering was no exception.

Everyone arrived laden with baskets of picnic fare including Cornish game hens, racks of spare ribs, enough fried chicken to feed an army and numerous other good things including black bean soup and cheese straws prepared by Jean and Olof Dahlstrand. An array of fresh fruits was provided by Micheline Giesen.

There was live music for listening or dancing on the green and there were prizes for the best and worst of anything and everything.

Want to join the APS? Well, $35 will buy you a membership including your very own plastic membership card which will be made out to "Donald Deagan." Your own name isn't important as long as you know the password and you'll get that only after you put up the green stuff. For further information on this unruly bunch just call 375-6310 and hope for the best.

THE AMERICAN Picnic Society had its first annual get-together at the Trail and Saddle Club May 7. Checking the guest list (from left) were Fred Farr, David Sailer and Soren Axelson.

SOREN AXELSON offered Joan Sailer a bunch of balloons at the picnic.

CV Community Park dedicated

KRISTINE TATE held on to her dad, Gary, who cut the ribbon Sunday to officially open the Carmel Valley Community Park. Tate, manager of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, was joined by Randy Randazzo, former president of the Carmel Valley Community Center Board of Directors, and Chuck Bosso, chairman of the board's park construction committee.

MEMBERS OF THE Carmel Valley Community Center Board of Trustees toasted the dedication of the park center with Randy Randazzo, who was president of the board when the "idea got off the ground," according to Debra Saxton, current president.

NO COMMUNITY FESTIVAL is complete without a few words from local politicians and the dedication to the Carmel Valley Community Park was no exception, as Supervisor William Peters (above) joined Rep. Leon Panetta and Assemblyman Sam Farr.

Environmental impact report expected for P.B. project

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission is expected to tell the Pebble Beach Company to come up with an environmental impact report for its proposed development at Spanish Bay when it meets May 25.

The company has asked the county planning department for a rezoning application that would pave the way for a golf course, a 270-unit hotel and 80 condominiums on 236 acres near Spanish Bay.

County planning staff has recommended the commission request an environmental impact report for the project, which is standard procedure for a development as large as the proposed Spanish Bay project, according to Robert Slimmon, Monterey County zoning administrator.

Slimmon said the project has priority as a visitor-serving, recreational development in the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program. The Monterey County Board of Supervisors was scheduled to take its final look at the Del Monte Forest LCP at its meeting this week before the Coastal Commission certifies the document.

The Spanish Bay development is also listed as a top priority in Monterey County water allocations to projects within the California-American Water Co.

The item is on the consent calendar, which is scheduled to be acted on at 9:05 a.m., Wednesday, May 25 in the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

Also next week, the planning commission will hear a report from a commission subcommittee on a proposed "granny housing" amendment to the county housing ordinance.

Planning commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel is chairman of the committee.

The report comes two weeks after a public hearing on the proposed amendment produced testimony from citizens who believe the amendment is either too restrictive or is a solution to low-income housing needs for the elderly.

The county planning staff recommended supervisors adopt a granny housing element, based on recent state legislation, with two major conditions.

First, according to Robert Slimmon, county zoning administrator, owners of homes that will be made available for granny housing must live on-site. Second, granny houses can have up to two persons living in them, but at least one must be at least 60 years old.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Environmental Health Department has stipulated that granny housing units on county property zoned for single-family dwellings outside a sanitary district service boundary must be located on at least two acres.

The environmental health department noted that two acres are needed to make room for septic system drain fields.

Carl Hooper, representative for Bestor Engineers of Monterey, said he believes the age restriction should be removed from the amendment. And the state legislation that allows "cottage dwellings" in areas zoned for single-family dwellings states that "a second unit does not have to be tied into granny housing," Slimmon said.

But Slimmon said such a provision in the Monterey County housing ordinance "would simply double the densities" in the county area and could have severe ramifications on water and sewage capacities.

In a similar vein, second units that would be used by owners of property during their visits to the Carmel area will be the topic of a public hearing, Tuesday, May 24 by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

San Francisco professors David and Jocelyn Baum have appealed Slimmon's denial of a use permit application to allow a guest house on their property on Castro Lane, just south of Carmel city limits and off Dolores Avenue.

Slimmon said the Baums rent their home on Castro Lane and had asked the county to transform the detached garage into sleeping quarters for use when they visit the area.

Slimmon said he denied the use permit based on the strain the added unit would have on parking in the Castro Lane area, which he said is "apparently horrendous" now.

The appeal before the board of supervisors is scheduled for 11:15 a.m., Tuesday, May 24 in the Monterey County Courthouse.

Also next week, Slimmon is expected to rule on a use permit for the 22 cottage units at Carmel River Inn.

Slimmon said the units are now "legal non-conforming uses" because they were built in the 1930s, before the zoning.

By obtaining a use permit for the existing units, owners of Carmel River Inn would not have to apply for a use permit for replacement units if any of the cottages are somehow destroyed, Slimmon said.

The Carmel Valley Inn matter is scheduled to be considered by the zoning administrator at 3:15 p.m. May 26.

Three arrested by authorities

Carmel business people assist counterfeit bust

CARMEL Police Chief Jack McGilvray credits two alert Carmel businessmen and a cooperative effort between his officers and Secret Service agents for the arrest of three women who allegedly passed counterfeit bills in Carmel last weekend.

First to sound the alarm was Jim Genone, owner of Equinox, a jewelry store on Ocean Avenue. When a clerk in his store reported the sale of a $750 ring and gave him the cash with which the ring had been purchased, Genone immediately recognized the $50 and $100 bills as counterfeit.

"I knew it intuitively," Genone said. But it was not only intuition. Genone worked in New York for a number of years where he had seen other counterfeit bills.

"The bills were newly made, and the paper itself had a strange texture to it," Genone explained. "When I looked closely, I could see that there were no red and white threads in them." Genone said that all American bills are printed with special, fine, colored threads which are impossible to duplicate. As certain as he was of his first impression, Genone checked with another shop owner in town. Then he called the Carmel Police Department.

THE NEXT counterfeit bills surfaced at Maxwell McFly's Watering Hole on Ocean Avenue near San Carlos Street.

There, one of the women who was subsequently arrested pulled a $50 bill out of a pocket that appeared to be bulging with similar bills. Bartender Tom Hughes, alerted by experience as a bartender in Chicago, where he saw many counterfeit bills, had "strange feelings" about this one. He compared it to another $50 bill he had in the register and was about to tell the woman she might have been given a bad one. However, she took the counterfeit money back without comment and started pulling different, good bills out of another pocket. Hughes acted.

He called the police department, officers responded and, confirming Hughes' suspicions, arrested the trio. The women, reported to have come from El Salvador, are Rosa Maria Sessa, 33, from Miami, Fla., and two women from Menlo Park — Noemi Cano, 46, and Marta Paine, 51.

The Carmel police officers then notified the Secret Service at their main office in San Francisco, and two agents responded immediately. Between the local officers and the agents, about $8,000 in counterfeit bills were recovered, along with property purchased from Carmel stores.

The local police department's next task, according to Chief McGilvray, is "to backtrack and return all the property to the stores from which it was purchased." According to the Secret Service agents, the money was probably manufactured in South America.

A Carmel Business Association alert has also been activated, warning shopkeepers to be cautious, or if suspicious about any $50 or $100 bills they took in last Sunday, to let the Carmel Police Department know. "Some of the bills at first glance probably looked pretty good," Chief McGilvray said.

Chief McGilvray praised the work of the Secret Service agents, under Richard McDrew, and the six Carmel police officers who participated in the arrests. They were Senior Officer Ken O'Donovan, Officers Phil Lunsford, Scott Lakey, Randy Harris and Ernie Miranda (who acted as interpreter) and Parking Officer Monique Moon, who served as police matron.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

More than 73 percent of Americans aged 65 or older have drawn up a will, compared with only 29 percent of those between the ages of 35 and 44. But it's something 100 percent of us should do, regardless of age. The cost can be as low as $25 for a simple will.

Count Leo Tolstoy, the author of "War And Peace," learned to ride a bicycle at the age of 67.

Animals may soon be prescribed as often as high blood pressure medication for older people. Research studies of the bond between humans and their pets indicate that animals can be an important positive factor in the lives of senior citizens. Besides offering companionship, dogs, cats, and birds are now being trained as "hearing ears," living fire alarms and intruder alerts.

Father Farrell's wisdom

A vow of silence

CARMEL ROTARY CLUB, LA PLAYA HOTEL

Oh Almighty and Eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use. Oh Lord, while we are asking for favors, this is a big one that we need: Keep us gentle in word, in deed and in spirit. We boldly walk into a room marked, "Gentlemen," even when we have not had a gentlemanly thought or performed a gentlemanly act for weeks.

Psychiatrists often diagnose us as having an inferiority complex, but most of us have just the opposite. We feel superior to others, and without a qualm, we take credit for all the talents we possess and all the acts that we perform.

When we have special gifts and talents that make us stand out in a crowd, help us, Oh Lord, to realize that we have received them from Thee. We delight in being praised, but help us to glory in the achievements of others and help us to rejoice in their success.

Finally, what this country needs more than a silent majority is a silent minority and perhaps our lives would be more tranquil if they both took a vow of silence. Amen.

Split votes, flared tempers mark council session

By MICHAEL GARDNER

SEVERAL LONG-standing issues before the Carmel City Council Tuesday flared tempers, split votes, and resulted in the scheduling of a public hearing on an issue the council apparently has already decided.

The council voted to ban all fireworks from Carmel Beach on the Fourth of July, fires will be limited to certain hours, and the beach will be closed to the public after 9 p.m. In addition, a six-foot-high, $3,500 rented cyclone fence is to be installed along Scenic Drive to protect the beach banks.

However, these actions will be incorporated into a new city ordinance to be the subject of a public hearing when the council meets at 7:30 p.m. June 7 at city hall. The public hearing is to be conducted three weeks after the initial council vote on the July Fourth measures.

A busy council Tuesday night:

- Discussed the controversial Piccadilly Park without taking action,
- Reaffirmed its opposition to the proposed Spanish Bay development in Pebble Beach,
- Reversed itself and prohibited a small parking lot at Mission Trail park,
- Tentatively approved controls on the Mission Ranch area proposed for annexation,
- Gave its blessing to the June "Surfabout" event at Carmel Beach.

The highlight of the evening was the split voting on ways to control Independence Day crowds at Carmel Beach.

A special council-appointed task force headed by Carmel Fire Chief Robert Updike presented a series of suggestions for council consideration. The council chose to consider each individually.

First, the council 3-2 approved a ban on fireworks at the beach with Council Members Robert Stephenson, David Maradei and Helen Arnold in the majority. Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilman Frank Lloyd dissented.

Mrs. Arnold, who previously voiced support for the traditional fireworks celebration, reversed herself because of concern over the beach bank erosion.

Councilmen Maradei and Stephenson strongly opposed fireworks and said they would attract too many people to a beach ravaged by winter storms and in bad need of repair.

BUT FIREWORKS did not create the late-night melee that marred last year's celebration, Mayor Charlotte Townsend said.

Mayor Townsend blamed the incident that led to several arrests on a gang of "if you'll excuse me, Carmel Valley cowboys."

"It was a beautiful family holiday until then and I don't think fireworks had a thing to do with it (the melee)," she said.

Carmel is fast becoming a "stalag" and an "armed camp" with its prohibitive regulations, the mayor said.

Councilman Frank Lloyd called fireworks "traditional" and said high tide will be at 6 p.m. on the Fourth of July. He noted that winter storms depleted most of the sand on the beach.

"Unless a great deal of sand comes in between now and then, there won't be much of a sandy beach to have a July Fourth on," Lloyd said.

Another method to control the crowds and protect the eroded beach bank was also approved by the council on a split vote.

The plan to erect a six-foot-high cyclone fence from Ocean to 13th avenues passed 3-2 with the mayor, Mrs. Arnold and Stephenson in favor. Councilmen Maradei and Lloyd opposed.

The cyclone fence will remain in place until the beach banks are repaired, which could take months.

"That seems to me to be cheap insurance to save the banks," Mrs. Arnold said.

The fence could be removed if it causes too many problems, Mayor Townsend pointed out.

"We could just bite the bullet, take our losses and take it down," she said.

But Maradei pointed out that the city would have to install a second fence at the foot of the banks to keep people already on the beach from climbing up the eroded areas.

In another crowd-controlling measure, the council voted 3-2 to close the beach on Independence Day at 9 p.m. Mayor Townsend, Stephenson and Mrs. Arnold approved of the measure while Maradei and Lloyd dissented.

"I don't think there's any way we can close the beach before sunset and the police cannot close it after sunset, so I think closing the beach is out," Maradei said.

Police Chief Jack McGilvray said his department could probably handle the closing unless a large group chose not to leave.

Asked by Mayor Townsend what he would do if such an incident occurred, the chief replied: "pray."

In reality, McGilvray said the department "would cite them and let the courts handle it. We won't physically remove anyone from the beach."

THE COUNCIL also voted to ban all fires after 7 p.m. on July 2 and 3. The measure was recommended by the July Fourth task force to discourage large parties before Independence Day, Fire Chief Robert Updike said.

The vote was 4-1 with Lloyd the only dissenter.

In addition, the council by consensus agreed to keep its July Fourth ban on parking on Scenic Road.

In another beach related matter, the council voted 4-1 to allow the fourth annual Surfabout contest on Carmel Beach on June 11-12.

Council members praised the group for its care and cleanup of the beach and general good behavior in previous years' events.

Councilman Maradei dissented because he fears the city is endorsing a "promotion" and that "ABC Sports" could come to the beach and make it a well-publicized event drawing "20,000."

Other council members said future councils could prohibit the event if it got out of control.

The council also reversed itself and prohibited the development of a five space parking lot at Mission Trail Park off Hatton Road.

The council previously approved the plan, but it was reconsidered because of neighborhood complaints. Voting for the prohibition were Stephenson, Lloyd and Mrs. Arnold. Mayor Townsend and Maradei want to build the parking lot.

Mrs. Arnold was previously the "swing vote" in the initial approval of the lot.

BUT MRS. Arnold said she made "a mistake" and wanted to keep the park in a natural state.

Councilman Lloyd said he opposed the lot because "we're all becoming a slave to the automobile."

Maradei favors the parking lot because many residents do not have access to the park without driving.

Comments from former Mayor Gunnar Norberg during the public presentation portion of the session on the proposed Piccadilly Park on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, flared tempers later on the "council comments" portion of the agenda.

The council tentatively is to decide whether voluntarily to place the fate of the 40-by-100 foot park before the electorate when it meets June 21.

Councilman Stephenson, a longtime opponent of the park, and Mrs. Arnold, a vehement supporter of Piccadilly, exchanged words.

Stephenson called it "shallow thinking" and "damn foolishness" for the council not to voluntarily order a November election.

If former mayor and anti-Piccadilly Park leader Barney Laiolo's 927-signature petition is certified by the county elections department, the council will be forced to order a special election on the fate of the park site at a cost of about $5,500, or about $4,000 more than if it is placed on the regular November ballot, Stephenson said.

"By doing nothing, we are going to be responsible for that extra expense," Stephenson said.

John Q. Public's Carmel retirement

By JOE LIVERNOIS

AFTER A LIFETIME of being chased by big ugly Russian bears and tugged in every direction by "Dem" donkeys and "GOP" elephants, John Q. Public is enjoying his retirement in Del Mesa Carmel.

It was quite an anxious world for John Q., haunted as he was by so many political animals. But life has been just dandy for his creator, Vaughn Shoemaker, the Chicago-born political cartoonist who has two Pulitzer Prizes framed on his study wall.

For millions of Chicago readers, John Q. Public was America personified. He was a conservative, balding gentleman who often wore a fedora. He had googly eyes and wore

He now shares space on Shoemaker's wall with the Pulitzers, autographed photographs of Carl Sandburg, Winston Churchill, Bill Mauldin and about a half-dozen presidents.

John Q. is content in retirement. And so is Shoemaker.

Though retired from the newspaper business, the two-time Pulitzer Prize winner today remains active with his paint brush. In fact, his paintings of Italian fishing villages and Mexican market scenes, rich in caricature, fetch good prices from collectors attracted to his famous name.

Shoemaker lives in Del Mesa Carmel, one of the nicer adult communities on the Monterey Peninsula.

It is not, all in all, a bad retirement for a kid who dropped out of high school his freshman year and who had no more ambition than to remain a lifeguard in South Side Chicago.

"But it started out mostly because I didn't have an education," he said in an interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

'MY MAIN MOTIVATION was a beautiful girl I met 65 years ago as a lifeguard and she was a peach. She turned out to be Miss Chicago and she's still my inspiration."

Shoemaker, creator of John Q. Public, had no incentive in life until Miss Chicago told him she would never marry him unless he made something of himself.

But what could an uneducated kid from the city possibly do to impress Miss Chicago? He liked to draw so he took a wild gamble and enrolled in a cartoon class in the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts.

"But I was lazy and a day dreamer and didn't take to hard work," he said. "And, as it turned out, World War I was almost over and the boys were coming back pretty well shot up."

"Well, Uncle Sam wanted to put them in school to give them a new start and there were 15 disabled veterans — Doughboys, I guess they were called — that the director of the school wanted to get into the cartoon class, which was already to crowded," Shoemaker said.

"So the director had to weed some of us out to make room for the Doughboys and you can imagine who the first one was. Me." Shoemaker, creator of John Q. Public, was down and out. He knew he had to do

JOHN Q. PUBLIC spent about 40 years of his discombobulated life in wild predicaments, threatened and chased by some of the most foreboding characters ever found in editorial cartoons. John Q. survived, however, and the creation of Vaughn Shoemaker, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winning cartoonist for the Chicago Daily News, is alive and retired in Del Mesa Carmel.

a bow tie. His wild mustache covered his mouth.

He looked shocked or worried most of the time and his cigar kept dropping from his mouth.

And why not? Shoemaker stuck him in the middle of so many wild confrontations with so many presumed evils and menaces.

The Depression kept John Q. beleaguered in the early 30s. Hitler banged the war drum while Congress went fishing in the early 40s. Government spending turned into Goliath. The fangs on that Red Russian Bear grew more ominous in the 50s.

And the donkey and the elephant kept bashing each other over the head.

But John Q. Public survived the mania of the 1900s to retire with dignity — and without regret — in Carmel.

Talents of local choreographers featured in Sunset dance concert

The Monterey Peninsula Dance Theatre will present Spring Concert '83 at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 21 at the Sunset Theater in Carmel. Love, nature, movement and music will be celebrated in this evening of dance which features premiere pieces by local choreographers and innovative works by guest artists from Northern California.

REED SCOTT, Marit Brook-Kothlow (clockwise), Gloria Elber, Sonja Jackson and Alysa Hawkins, members of the Monterey Peninsula Dance Theatre, will perform Spring Concert '83 at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 21 in the Sunset theater, Carmel. Tickets at $6 and $4 are available at Monterey Dance Workshop, 559 Tyler St., Monterey.

Modern ballet, jazz and new wave styles will be featured. Solar Seasons, choreographed by Frank Quilantang, Jr., captures nature's cycle with jazzy African and Haitian flair.

Judie Connors, an instructor at the Monterey Dance Workshop, offers a modern dance of lovers troubled by an interloper. Night Song, the signature piece of Cecelia-Marie Bowman of San Francisco, is lyrically danced to an electrified violin. Leslie Swaha will lead her Santa Cruz troupe, the Crash Burn and Die Dance Company, in an abstract, new wave dance.

The Monterey Peninsula Dance Theatre is a non-profit dance "collective" which serves as a performance outlet for local dancers and choreographers. Organized three years ago, the Dance Theatre's goals are to build talent and to introduce the Monterey Peninsula to the evolving style of American dance.

Tickets are $6 and $4 for reserved seats and are available at the Monterey Dance Workshop, 559 Tyler St., Monterey or at the door on the evening of the performance. For more information, phone 649-0698.

something and he had to do something quick. After all, he had a beautiful girl to win.

"So I took some of my samples over to the Chicago Daily News and showed them to the art director," he said. "He was one of those bad executives. You know the type: he didn't have the nerve to tell a 19-year old kid without any talent he was no good. He told me to come back again sometime."

"Somewhere along the line, I was told that the only way to succeed was to be persistent, so I came back, all right. I came back every other day. Eventually, he ran out of ways to tell me no."

The Chicago Daily News had a stable of about two dozen "artists" who drew everything from political cartoons to comic strips to little "joke fillers."

For a little while, Shoemaker drew the "fillers" and did a couple of courtroom sketches, including some drawn during the Al Capone trial.

UP TO THAT POINT in Shoemaker's life, persistence and pluckiness had paid off. Then he got that big break. "Some call it luck," he said, "but I prefer to call it a miracle."

The chief political cartoonist was hired by the New York Herald Tribune. And then the assistant political cartoonist was hired by King Syndicates.

As a result, the "assistant to the assistant political cartoonist" was thrust into action at a time when his wife's life was threatened in childbirth.

"The fellow was a good cartoonist and a brilliant man," Shoemaker remembered. "He was far more qualified than I. But at the most critical time in his life, he could not produce."

The assistant to the assistant missed deadline the first two days and on the third day, he could not show up at all.

The editors had no choice, Shoemaker said. "I was the only one left who wanted to be a political cartoonist."

In those days, the political cartoon was placed four columns wide "smack in the middle" of the front page. It was an awesome hole to fill and it had to be done immediately.

The problem, of course, was that Shoemaker was simply an uneducated kid from South Side Chicago trying to fill one of the most important holes in one of the most important newspapers in the world.

"I didn't even know if the paper was Republican or Democrat," said Shoemaker, creator of John Q. Public. "But I had to make good because I had this girl...."

"What I did was pray. I was like a G.I. in a foxhole. I just prayed. And somehow I got

An old-fashioned carriage parade along the dusty Pebble Beach trails

Patricia A. James of Modesto and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Freschi of Pebble Beach will lead the third annual Pebble Beach Pleasure Drive at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 21 in Pebble Beach.

The drive is designed to show off the scenic views of Del Monte Forest and oceanfront along 17 Mile Drive. The chairmen of the event have selected fire trails through the Huckleberry Hill section of Pebble Beach combined with secluded paved roads to accommodate a dozen assorted carriages and horses with the usual traffic pattern.

Members of the California Carriage Foundation and Peninsula Driving Club are the guests of honor. The one and one-half hour pleasure drive will be followed by an informal wine and cheese party in the "Country Kitchen" at the Equestrian Center in Pebble Beach.

Among the rigs expected to turn out for the Pebble Beach Pleasure Drive are "gigs," two high-wheeled carriages which carry one or two passengers; a "demi-break," which is a six-passenger high, light touring carriage drawn by a team of two or four horses; "traps" (also known as Sporting Phaetons) which are four-wheeled vehicles so named because they have trap doors which offer accessibility from the front and rear and a wagonet break.

The driving horses will include hackney ponies, standard-breds, quarter horses, Arabians and crossbreds.

Spectators are invited to watch the parade at the polo field and along the drive. They may also speak with the drivers about their historical carriages. There is no charge except for the $4 gate fee at the entrances of Pebble Beach.

Film review:'Dr. Detroit' a limp farce

By LISA JENSEN

Dr. Detroit. With Dan Aykroyd and Howard Hesseman. Written by Carl Gottlieb & Robert Boris and Bruce Jay Friedman. Directed by Michael Pressman. A Universal release. Rated R.

DAN AYKROYD is one of the most inventive, consistently funny performers Saturday Night Live ever had, but you'd never know it from his new movie, Dr. Detroit.

It took three writers to concoct this limp, nonsensical farce (including Bruce Jay Friedman, whose novel, Detroit Abe, was its dubious inspiration), and none of them has the slightest idea how to make use of Aykroyd's gifts as a comic character actor. Instead, they dress him up in a bunch of silly costumes and launch him into a series of feeble blackout skits with no coherent material to perform.

Aykroyd plays shy, twerpy Clifford Skridlow, an associate professor of English literature at a small private university in suburban Chicago. His father is the university chancellor, and Cliff (whose special field is medieval chivalry) still lives at home with his parents. By chance, one day, he crosses the path of Smooth Walker (Howard Hesseman in a surprisingly lifeless performance), a well-to-do pimp with a fleet of four classy call girls.

Smooth is in trouble with the local crime boss, a touch-as-nails old battle-axe named Mom (Kate Murtagh). Unable to pay back a loan, Smooth stalls with a fabricated ruse about one "Dr. Detroit," the ultimate bad-dude boss pimp who's taken over the finances of his operation. Then Smooth skips town and leaves his girls in Cliff's care. Unable to resist the plight of four damsels in distress, Cliff agrees to impersonate Dr. Detroit to keep the girls out of Mom's evil clutches.

This premise is pretty idiotic in the first place, and it doesn't get any better as it goes along. Aykroyd's Dr. Detroit creation, with his platinum fright wig, chain mail jousting glove, but not especially funny.

And it's never explained where a mild-mannered nebbish like Cliff gets the acting skill and sheer chutzpah to bring the wild impersonation off. It's like the Jekyll-Hyde story without the critical factor of the transformation potion.

The supporting cast is made up entirely of tedious stereotypes. There's the jive-talking black chauffeur who plays Sancho to Cliff's Quixote/Detroit and a wealthy, but easily irritated tycoon who's going to save the university with a huge endowment. And, of course, there's Smooth's veritable United Nations of call girls, one black, one Asian, a blonde Wasp and a Brooklyn brunette.

Comedy vignettes are either completely predictable, like the girls calling Cliff on the conference line in the middle of a staid faculty meeting, or totally baffling, like Dr. Detroit's showdown with Mom in a junkyard, where he inexplicably triumphs over dozens of her gun-toting thugs. This movie's idea of big yuks is calling Mom's two dim-witted henchmen "Johnny" and "Carson."

The major question posed by the debacle of Dr. Detroit is not, as some people have suggested, whether Aykroyd can survive as a solo star without long-time partner John Belushi, but whether any performer, however talented, can survive this kind of sloppy, mediocre writing.

What's playing at the movies

An Officer and a Gentleman: A story of how boys become men during the Navy's officers' training program and the romances they had with the town girls. Louis Gossett, Jr., is superb as a tough drill sergeant. Richard Gere and Debra Winger as the young officer and his independent girlfriend, are portrayed as lovers in a fresh and honest way. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Betrayal: Everyone keeps a very stiff British upper lip in Harold Pinter's surprisingly compelling tale of adultery, which starts at the end of the affair and turns the clock back to its first not-so-magical moments. Rated R. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Blue Thunder: A fast-moving, hard-edge action spectacle about a sophisticated helicopter that is unleashed on the Los Angeles Police Department, with Roy Scheider at the controls. Riveting aerial scenes in which it appears that half of L.A. is levelled. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Breathless: Richard Gere is Jesse Lujak, bad news but irresistible. In no time flat he is a desperado in search of his fantasy lady, Monica, played by the French actress Valerie Kaprisky. She is the realist momentarily caught up in Jesse's considerable charms. Rated R. At the Regency Theatre.

Diva: In French, with English subtitles, is a romantic chase thriller about a dreamy, love-struck Parisian postman who falls in love with an American black opera singer. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Dr. Detroit: Dan Aykroyd goes solo in this comedy about an English literature professor who masquerades as a pimp to save a string of prostitutes from some evil gangsters. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

Exposed: Directed by James Toback, is a story of international terrorism, set against the backdrop of the high fashion world. It stars Nastassia Kinski, Rudolf Nureyev and Harvey Keitel. Rated P. At the Valley Cinema.

First Blood: A Green Beret specialist, Sylvester Stallone, who has been kidnapped and tortured by the Vietcong, wanders into a misty, mountain town in the American Northwest years later and is taken for a hippie drifter by the local sheriff. Too proud to tell anyone of his past, Stallone flies into a rage. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Flashdance: Alex Owens, a beautiful and talented dancer, supports her creative endeavors by working as a welder by day and a dancer by night. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Frankenstein: an erotic, thrilling comedy by Andy Warhol in 3-D with lots of blood and guts. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Gandhi: A story of the life and times of the great Indian statesman. Ben Kingsley gives a wonderful performance as he shows the transformation of an Indian lawyer into the powerful spokesman for non-violence and the moral force behind India's drive for independence. Rated PG. At the Cinema 70.

I The Jury: One man takes on the town as judge, jury and prosecutor. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Local Hero: A fresh and daffy comedy about a young Texas oil company man dispatched to the West Coast of Scotland to buy up shoreland for oil exploration. Since his boss, Burt Lancaster, is a dippy stargazer with decidedly eccentric habits, all does not go as planned. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Lords of Discipline: David Keith blows the lid off things in a strict Southern military academy where a secret organization has been terrorizing selected cadets. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Parasite: A gory film seen in 3-D splendor. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Polltergeist: A Stephen Spielberg masterpiece of horror that takes a normal suburban family into a nightmare world of evil and unspoken horrors. Rated R. At the Golden Bough Theatre.

Return of the Jedi: The new film which continues George Lucas's epic adventure which began with Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back, is packed with action and surprises which answer all of the saga's previously unresolved questions. It concludes the middle third of the nine-part series which Lucas has conceived as three trilogies. Mark Hamill returns as Luke Skywalker, Harrison Ford as Han Solo and Carrie Fisher as Princess Leia Organa. Billy Dee Williams is Lando Calrissian and Anthony Daniels returns as See-Threepio. Rated PG. Coming to Cinema 70.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: The cult classic where two teenagers, Brad and Janet, meet Dr. Frankfurter, a Transylvanian transvestite. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Something Wicked This Way Comes: Based on the novel by Ray Bradbury, this film is the story of two boys who come upon a strange carnival at the edge of town and its deadly secrets. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough Theatre.

Space Hunter: Adventures in the Forbidden Zone: A 3-D adventure about a space tramp who answers a distress signal and finds three lovely women marooned on a ship from a plague-infested planet. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

The Hunger: A frightening story where perfection and beauty are an illusion barely concealing a corrupt and decadent existence and where the ancient symbol of life, the ankh, becomes an instrument of death. With Catherine Deneuve and David Bowie. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Film Society presents diversity

The Monterey Peninsula Film Society will present Max Havelaar, in Dutch with English subtitles, at 8:15 p.m. Friday, May 20 and Saturday, May 21.

Throne of Blood in Japanese with English subtitles, is scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday, May 25. Both films will be shown in the Morse Auditorium of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, 425 Van Buren St., Monterey.

Max Havelaar is based on a true story. It takes place in the mid-19th century in Java, where a man attempts to abolish slavery and the exploitation of natural resources in the Dutch East Indies. It was filmed on location.

Throne of Blood is directed by Akira Kurosawa and is his version of Shakespeare's Macbeth. He spares no effort to create an atmosphere of obsessive madness and supernatural compulsion. It is set in medieval Japan and appears as a ritualized series of events and responses beyond the reach of rational intervention.

Tickets are $3.50 general admission, $2.75 for students, seniors and military and $2 for Film Society members and are available at the door.

Senior Day at Toro Regional Park

Theater review

An uplifting musical comedy

By SHIRLEEN HOLT

A FEW WEEKS ago, while I watched a musical at a local theater, my eye was riveted to a member of the chorus.

He spoke no lines that I could recall, but his stage presence and energy was such that he commanded attention every time he appeared. Apparently Monterey Peninsula College instructor Peter DeBono noticed him too because he cast Michael Romero in the title role of Pippin.

Pippin, MPC's latest show, is a stylized and symbolic journey through a man's life as he searches for ultimate fulfillment.

Pippin is aided by a character called, simply: Leading Player, a man who has the power to grant Pippin his every wish. Pippin finds, however, that as soon as his desires are fulfilled, he is left feeling more dissatisfied than before. Then he discovers, behind the tarnished glitter of power, lust and fortune, a simple kind of truth — love.

Directed by Peter DeBono, Pippin is exciting and inspirational. DeBono surprises his audience with a variety of inventive staging techniques. Mists, silhouettes and other dramatic lighting effects create an aura of magic and mysticism as the story unfolds. The pacing is brisk and the numbers and bits skillfully tuned and polished.

Steven Goings as the Leading Player is sensitive, seductive, brash and bawdy as he slithers through his role of devil's advocate. Though he does not yet command his part, Goings comes very close.

As Pippin, Michael Romero is fresh and innocent, yet stubbornly determined as he enters into each new game of life. Romero has a beautiful singing voice and a simple, sincere style of performing.

Michael Halton's arrogant King Charles is powerful and precise and Dana Robinson as Lewis, Pippin's hollow-headed, muscle-man brother, tackles his role in an amusing, understated style.

Robin Hanna Jarrell as Fastrada, Pippin's mother, is sinfully bewitching. Fastrada is a not-so-ordinary wife and mother with a not-so-ordinary affection for her son Lewis. Jarrell is playful and naughty, but certainly never threatening.

In a brief number (but perhaps the show's highlight), Betty Fowlston appears as Pippin's grandmother, Berthe. Fowlston is delightful as the plucky senior citizen. She leads the audience in a spoof-like singalong (complete with words, music and a bouncing ball), as she offers Pippin some of her own advice.

Robin Pease as Catherine, Pippin's love, is sweet, sincere and funny. Pease avoids making the character syrupy by emphasizing the humor and delicacy of new love.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the show is Kara Pasierb as Catherine's daughter, Thea. A little girl with a big voice, Kara gives a beautiful, clear rendition of the somber "Prayer for a Duck."

Lucretia Butler and Akemi Ito's choreography is imaginative and original, with just a hint of the cautious, erotic Bob Fosse style. However, the play's opening number needs a bit more flash. It appears that the performers are holding back and at times the dancing is too reserved and contrived.

Constance's Gamere's costumes are the best I have ever seen. Gamere handles this enormous undertaking with skill and detailed perception of the characters and the general aim of the play.

D. Thomas Beck's set is colorful and versatile, and his lighting is creative. Beck uses bright colors, patterns and a variety of special effects.

The play is not without flaws. Some parts are slow and need polish; others simply don't work. But these are really trivial matters and do not affect the overall feeling of the play — a feeling which leaves the audience uplifted and entertained.

Pippin plays one final weekend, Thursday through Saturday at Monterey Peninsula College.

Where's Harvey?

FLORENCE MASON as Ethel Chauvenet and Elwood's Sister, Veta, played by Florence Larsen, look on in dismay as Elwood P. Dowd, played by Jim Jensen, adjusts the necktie of his invisible pal, Harvey, a six foot one and a half inch rabbit, in the Wharf Theater production of Harvey scheduled to open at 8:30 p.m. Friday, May 13 on Old Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. For reservations, phone 372-2882.

Tickets are $4 per person or $6 per couple. Proceeds will be donated to the YWCA Crisis Line and to Men for Non-Violent Relationships.

Auditions for an original production

Auditions for the musical Crowd of Stars are scheduled for Sunday, May 22 and Monday, May 23 by appointment only at the SRO Theater at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The play will premiere in September at the SRO Theater. Max Robert, winner of the 1970 Monterey County Symphony Composition Award and co-author and writer of the score for Upon A Dying lady, will direct Crowd of Stars. Pauline Thomas will provide musical direction.

Music cornerA melancholy scene at MPC

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

THE ROMANZA from the Poulenc Clarinet Sonata was the perfect reflection of the melancholy scene at Monterey Peninsula College.

The sad and sweet decadence of the music magnified the hollow remains of the Music Hall as the lonely audience applauded the two Swiss performers with compensatory effort.

The program, in mid-March, by clarinetist Lux Brahn and pianist Hanni Schmid-Wyss, a victim of almost non-existent promotion, attracted a handful of intrepids who knew what the Music Hall concerts used to be. Lack of promotion only led the list of deteriorations in what once had been a beacon of performing arts on the peninsula.

The unraveling curtain finally gave up and no new one could be expected to fill the void or to give visiting artists the needed cloister of preparation. A drum set platform had been up-ended and propped at an angle against a side wall which barely screened the door through which the musicians entered the stage area. Pianist Schmid-Wyss did not even gain the attentions of a staff person to open or close the lid of the piano as the program progressed from ensemble to solo and back again.

The performance went well and improved but, at its end, Heinz Hubler, MPC community services director, shook his head and joked: "It looks like curtains for us."

Since passage of Prop. 13, near extinction is all that remains for the college's capability to produce and sponsor performance events by outside musicians. The college's ability to offer even the barest services sees only dark at the end of the tunnel.

In the middle of his survey of the Beethoven piano sonatas, William Corbett-Jones found that neither of two previously acceptable instruments would function. He simply moved his series to the Museum of Art rather than struggle with the college pianos. (Unfortunately Corbett-Jones injured a finger and cancelled the series altogether.)

Huber noted ruefully: "I'm not sure that any of our three pianos is currently worthy of a concert pianist, and at least they should be examined by players and piano experts. We haven't been able to maintain them properly and I imagine some complete overhauls may be required."

Because of Prop. 13, new rules regarding the college sponsorship of visiting performing artists were adopted by the board. From that time, the community services department could no longer contract with artists for a guaranteed fee. Rather, Hubler or his representative could only agree to a percentage after expenses. The problem was compounded by the loss of CAPES, the College Association for Public Events and Services, another Prop. 13 victim that had functioned as a booking agent for community colleges throughout the state.

THE PROGRAM that had flowered to such eminence in the 1960s, largely through the singular efforts of Angie Macado, now seems completely hamstrung, injured and insulated.

Now the only performing arts events to visit the campus with any shred of dependable dignity or at least chance of reasonable success will be entirely self-sustaining and self-promoting.

Still it is Hubler and his community services office which hold the probable solution to this severe cutback. Hubler has tacit approval by the MPC board through the college administrator to create a structure of community music and arts lovers in order to find funds to restore and revitalize the college's historic commitment.

Huber hopes the resultant funds, which may pass through an arm of a recently-formed foundation, would buy a new curtain for the Music Hall and acquire two new or restored pianos. Hubler has approached various known concert supporters in the community, though he acknowledges the project is still at the talking stage.

"I envision that within half a year we'll have the organizational details worked out and in another half year we'll be able to receive funds. Within two years I hope to effect purchase of a quality concert piano," he said.

Why has it taken this long to mount such an effort since the effects of Prop. 13 have been well known at the college since it first passed? "There has been a tremendous restructuring of community services," he explained. "We have been responsible for a large increase of short course and professional seminars and workshops. The performing arts have been pushed to the edge of priorities. Our work load has both shifted and increased, and it's true for community colleges all over the state."

And why does this effort pivot on Hubler? "I'm the closest to it. Everyone else at the college is swamped with their primary responsibilities. And we are at the point where crucial decisions have to be made. Shall the college bring performing artists to the community? Theoretically we could go on as we have, but certainly not ideally."

Tiny audiences, inadequate pianos, facilities without proper furnishings and fittings, and inadequate and ineffective publicity are clearly a long way from anything ideal. The problem is grave.

But in the bigger sphere of the Monterey Peninsula it is a symptom of a much bigger one that this column will investigate in the coming weeks.

Backgammon

Choice of points

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 4-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Your first impulse is to make your 4-point, moving the four from your 8-point and the two from your 6-point. The 4-point is highly valuable, and you would surely make this move if Black's runners were in their original position on your 1-point.

In the actual position, however, you gain more by blocking the Black runners than by making an additional point in your home board. You should have other chances to make your 4-point and your bar point, but you must first make sure that you lock the door on Black's men.

For the purpose of blocking, the most important points are those five and six away from your opponent. With three men on your 8-point, you already have the point five away from Black's runners. Now you must make the point that is six away.

Move the four from your midpoint and the two from your 11-point, making your 9-point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

'First Elizabeth' reads smoothly

By JEAN THURMAN

The First Elizabeth by Carolly Erickson. (Summit Books, $19.95; 447 pages.)

Elizabeth I of England and her parents — Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII — are some of the most fascinating people out of history. They have been the subject of many biographies, novels and plays, yet they continue to attract authors and readers.

Carolly Erickson has written two previous biographies, Great Harry about Elizabeth's father, and Bloody Mary about her sister. She has a strong academic background and includes a great deal of historic detail, but her biography of Queen Elizabeth I reads as smoothly as an exciting novel.

Henry VIII divorced his wife Catherine in order to marry Anne Boleyn in hopes of begetting a male heir to his throne. Anne never bore a male child, but did give birth to Elizabeth three years before she was executed for treason. Since Henry had declared his marriage to Catherine invalid, his daughter Mary was illegitimate, and Elizabeth became heir to the crown.

This lasted only a short time though, as Henry's third wife Jane Seymour bore a son, who was to become Edward VI. Elizabeth was raised as a king's daughter, well provided for and well educated, but never close to her family.

She was a brilliant student who learned Greek and Latin, Italian and French. She studied the classics and translated them into English and back into the original. She also studied theology, elocution, italic handwriting and music.

She was an intelligent, attractive, and passionate woman, and was the subject of scandalous gossip from the time she was a young teenager. Her unrestrained flirtations with her guardian, and later one of her advisors have led to speculation about whether she truly was the "Virgin Queen."

She became queen at the age of 25 after the death of both her half-brother and half-sister, and went on to rule England for 44 years until her death at age 70. She never married, despite several offers, and so ruled without a consort all that time.

She was an astute politician who quelled several rebellions and kept her advisors and Parliament under her thumb. She was quite active politically and interfered in Scotland, the Netherlands, France, and Spain. She changed the religion of her country from Mary's Catholicism to her father's Protestantism, and encouraged other countries to do the same.

"She had achieved a reputation for greatness, if not for goodness, yet for all her capacity she would bequeath to her successor a distempered and overburdened realm, cankered by an unsound economic system, huge debts, acrimonious religious differences, brutal persecution of Catholics and widespread poverty and misery," according to the author.

Despite these problems, she was popular with the majority of her subjects, sometimes to the point of idolatry. Miss Erickson describes a cult of the queen that took place in the latter half of Elizabeth's reign, where she was the allegorical subject of poetry, plays and art work.

Elizabeth's sphere was pretty much limited to political intrigues and court life; it is these areas the author illuminates for us. She describes the roles of the various ladies who attended the queen, what their duties consisted of and how they spent their time — gossiping and quarrelling, for the most part.

The real work of waiting on the queen fell to the chamberers. In her description of their duties Erickson shows her vast knowledge of court life at the time and allows the reader to understand the details of Elizabeth's life.

"They dressed her hair, combing and brushing it into mounds of curls, building it outward with swathes of false hair, fastening into its serpentine involutions an array of pearls and rosettes and jewels to match those in her gowns and at her ears. They laced and tied and fastened her into eight layers of clothing — from smock to petticoat to bodice, skirt, kirtle, gowns, and sleeves — and then added to these collars, cuffs, stomachers, a ruff, high heeled shoes in colored leather or silk, scented gloves, jewelry (a great deal of it...) a ribbon at the waist on which were fastened a pomander, a watch, a fan, perhaps a silken mask."

Erickson makes it clear that life was not exactly comfortable between the layers of clothing, the inadequate plumbing, the smells, and the dangers of disease. Smallpox and plague were constant dangers. Elizabeth suffered from smallpox herself, and many of her court died of it.

Erickson is at her best in describing the life Elizabeth and her courtiers led. The commoners and the clergy are skipped over as not having much bearing on Elizabeth's life. She led a court life, and moved from one court to another, but never left her country. There was immense frivolity in her life, and also immense responsibility. Elizabeth plunged herself into both with great success.

Kaida wins grant award

The 1983 Ferguson Grant has been awarded to Tamarra Kaida of Phoenix by the Friends of Photography of Carmel.

The Ferguson Grant was established in 1972 and is presented each year to a photographer who has demonstrated excellence in and commitment to creative photography. The purpose of the $2,000 cash award is to assist in the professional and artistic growth of the recipient.

Ms. Kaida received a B.A. degree in 1974 from Goddard College and a M.F.A. degree in 1979 from the State University of New York at Buffalo and the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester.

Her black and white portraits of young people have been a part of several major exhibitions in the past year, including "Contemporary Photography and Fantasy" at the Santa Barbara Museum of Art and "Between Twelve and Twenty" at the Loomis Institute, Windsor, Conn.

In recent years her images have appeared in such publications as Camera 35, Exposure and the Time/Life Library of Photography. Kaida lives in Phoenix and serves on the faculty at Arizona State University in Tempe.

The juror for the 1983 Ferguson Grant was Mary Ellen Mark, a freelance photographer who has traveled internationally for nearly two decades to document the world's people for such magazines as Life, Paris Match, Time, MS, and U.S. Camera. Her images have been the subject of two major monographs, Ward 81 (1979) and Falkland Road (1981).

She has taught at the 1982 Ansel Adams Workshop at the Friends of Photography and has promoted creative photography among students nationwide.

TAMARRA KAIDA is the 1983 recipient of the Ferguson Grant from the Friends of Photography, located in the Sunset Center, Carmel. This photograph is from the Fairy Tale Series.

Sonja Blomdahl will exhibit hand-blown glass from her current series of banded forms with a reception for the artist from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, May 20 - at Walter/White Fine Arts, located at Seventh Avenue and San Carlos Street in Carmel.

Ms. Blomdahl has blown glass for more than 10 years. She studied at the Orrefors factory and with Ann Warff in Sweden as well as at numerous small studios and factories in Italy, Ireland, Holland and Germany.

"I feel I have reached a state of skill that I can incorporate my design sense into the glass; I have always loved symmetry and simple form — the colors I have added to decorate the form," Ms. Blomdahl said.

The series on exhibit is a body of works that has taken three years to reach its level of refinement and development.

"I feel the most successful pieces glow and give an illusion of lightness set upon a table, yet appear ready to lift off," she added.

The exhibit will continue through June 17. Gallery hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily. For more information, phone 624-4957.

THE VERY LATEST

As we go to press, we learn that Sergeant Geroge W. Coover, an American boy who served for 11 months with the Canadian forces in France, is to make an address at Sunday's Red Cross rally. Coover was captured by the Germans and held prisoner 23 months, then he made his escape. His regiment was nearly wiped out at Ypres. He served at Armentiers, and later was among those who for months held the famous Regina Trench. And Sergeant Coover was in action at Vimy Ridge. He was captured at St. Eloi. Be sure to hear him.

BEER FOAMS TO SPLASH LEGALLY AS CARMEL GOES DRIPPING WET

Dry since the days long before prohibition, Carmel was celebrating this week following a complete wet victory at the polls Monday when voters favored the sale of 3.2 percent beer in the village.

By a two to one majority, the dries lost out. The wets, without much effort, were able to obtain 449 votes for the sale of beer while the dries only had 259 ballots on their side.

Carmel, which has always restricted the moistening of parched throats to secluded kitchens, has been known in temperance circles as a dry community. Even in the early days, artists, writers and poets had to go over the hill to Monterey to get their "inspiration."

With the victory at the polls, however, beer and light wines will be sold openly in local stores and in restaurants. The sale does not become legal until next Monday night when the city council meets to count the ballots and proclaim the election results officially.

"The people of Carmel have spoken and the results show that what is happening all over the country has taken place here," Mayor John Catlin said when informed of the wet victory. "The election was the only way of settling the question so that now everyone is satisfied on how the majority of residents stand."

PRINCE BERTIL DROPS IN ON BIRGIT AND DAGMAR

Shortly after noon yesterday Birgit Carlson heard someone enter her restaurant on Dolores Street.

"I looked around and there was His Royal Highness Prince Bertil of Sweden," she said.

Birgit and her sister, Dagmar, are from the town of Halmstad in the Province of Halland in Sweden. Prince Bertil is the Duke of Halland and has a summer home just outside Halmstad which was given to him by the people of the province for a fortieth birthday present.

Birgit and Dagmar served coffee and almond cake to His Royal Highness and chatted about Halmstad and his home there.

Before he left he signed the guest book: "Thanks for the coffee and the almond cake, Prince Bertil of Sweden." He is the uncle of the crown prince of Sweden and son of the king, and has been spending this week at Cypress Point Club.

CBA ASKS JANUARY CROSBY DATE

The Carmel Business Association has sent a letter asking Bing Crosby to return the annual Bing Crosby Golf Tournament to its traditional date.

The proposal is for the 1974 Crosby tournament to be Washington's Birthday weekend, which would be Feb. 16-18. The CBA, like other organizations on the Monterey Peninsula, feels this date would adversely affect local business.

"Not only would the Washington's Birthday weekend represent a substantial loss to the economy of the Monterey Peninsula, but we feel it would greatly inconvenience those who attend the tournament," the letter states.

"This weekend is traditionally one of the busiest times of the year. Accommodations would be extremely difficult and would greatly contribute to an already over-crowded situation and many small business people including restaurants and inn keepers depend greatly upon the January business generated by the tournament."

The Carmel Business Association represents some 350 business and professional people in the Carmel area. Members include motels, retail shops, realtors and restaurants.

The letter was sent with the unanimous vote of members present at a recent board meeting.

SOU KIE

ACUPRESSURE • WHALPOP • PUHANG
27890 Dorris Drive #7 Carmel (Mid-Valley) 624-2300

SOU KIE means "the hand's energy" and refers to energy transmitted through the hands. In the East it has long been known that physical and mental well-being depend on the quality and flow of "ki" or "chi" energy which we in the West might translate as bio-energy. This energy can be activated or balanced and harmonized by a variety of methods which include acupuncture, acupressure, and other techniques that are less known in the West such as ahmma, whalpop, and puhang.

These therapeutic massage techniques have proven to enhance the vital energy and natural healing power in the body. Thus they give you satisfactory relief and comfort to those who have to complain of low energy, chronic pains, stress and/or tiredness. Our service is especially recommended for women's usual problems, such as stiff backneck, discomfort or pain in the arms and legs, low backache, overweight, nervousness and neurosis. Our service will help much to bring you back to your natural health, full energy and youngness, and everyday happiness.

Langley smacks first homer in youth baseball

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

NOT PREVIOUSLY reported on the Mustang field, Brian Langley (Rudy Harris) hit the first home run, over-the-fence of the season for a victory over Orange Julius, 10-2.

George Zarate did a great job of pitching for Rudy Harris and had two singles. On the other side, Orange Julius was helped out by Kevin Mahoney, who not only pitched well but also had a double and a single.

Recent games include Rudy Harris vs. Carmel Insurance, with Rudy Harris coming out on top 13-8. Chris Palumbo (RH) was pitcher of record and Scott Allen helped out at bat with two doubles.

Also on the Mustang field, County Mounties pitchers allowed no hits in winning the 10-run rule shortened game 12-1 when they met Carmel Realtors. Chris Prieto pitched the win, made two doubles and went 2-3. His brother Rick also doubled and went 2-2, with double hitters Dylan Sheldon, Dan Higgins and Sky Feekes all helping out with the score.

The next evening we saw Orange Julius lose to Dick Bruhn 13-2. Benedict Jones got the win with Danny Kleinhardt helping at bat with two doubles.

County Mounties got the win again from Orange Julius 24-3 with lots of help from the Prieto boys. Chris had a single, double and triple, and Rick came up with three doubles.

Carmel Insurance lost to Dick Bruhn 7-2. Danny Kleinhardt was pitcher of record. Danny was robbed of a nice hit by a great stop made by Greg Jackson (CI) who threw to first baseman Colin Braudrick for the out.

On the Bronco field, La Playa lost to Pine Inn by a close margin of 11-10. Russell Peavey was winning pitcher with help from leading hitter David Faber, who went 3-4. Kevin Winton and Ryan Meyer (both LP) were robbed of terrific hits by Steve White and Donovan Sinton with great catches in the field.

The next day, Nielsen Market beat Carmel Valley Disposal 14-11, and Robert D'Attilio pitched the win. Helping at bat for Nielsen Market were Christian Sutton, with a double, and Sean Morton. Doubles for Carmel Valley Disposal were made by Phillip Lee and Mike Sobel.

Eric LeTowt saved the day for La Playa in an extra inning game with Derek Rayne ending 8-7, by a beautiful double to right field. He batted in the winning run after two outs already had been made. Mindy Faia had tied the game earlier with a double leading to a home run on errors. She also was pitcher of record, with help from Chip Meheen, who pitched three scoreless innings.

Mindy went 2-4, with two doubles to her credit. Aram Stoney (LP) made a great catch on third base, and a double play to first baseman Clyde Klauman to put out batter Will Griffith (DR). Earlier, Jason Vogelpohl (DR) robbed Eric LeTowt (LP) of another beautiful hit to right field. Bating a double for Derek Rayne was Chris Cummings.

ON MAY 12 in a big hitting game, Nielsen Market finally pulled ahead of Pine Inn 13-10. Scott Gill was winning pitcher, doubled, and was a leading batter, along with Robert D'Attilio and Scott Smith. Paul Tarrantino also doubled for Nielsen Market. Leading hitters for Pine Inn included Russell Peavey, Robbie Takigawa and David Faber, who also doubled along with Adam Greene.

La Playa lost to Nielsen Market 11-6, with Scott Gill again winning pitcher. Lead hitters for Nielsen Market were Scott Smith and Benno Weiner who both also doubled. Helping La Playa were Chip Meheen and Clyde Klauman, with a double each. Sean Morton made a beautiful foul ball fly catch for Nielsen Market.

Christian Cummings pitched the win for Derek Rayne when they came out on top of Carmel Valley Disposal 10-9. Aaron Eppler and Christian Cummings both doubled for Derek Rayne, and leading hitters for Carmel Valley Disposal were Brandon Kirsch, who also doubled, Gabe Galster, and Armando DeAnda.

In the major-league girls' softball division, Fouratt beat P.G. Green in a make up game 6-3. Stacey White pitched the win, doubled twice and went 2-3, with help at bat from Michelle Melicia, who also doubled twice and went 3-3, and Kelly Kern with a 3-3. Elvina Scott made a great double play to Michelle Melicia and the team scored four runs after two were out for the win.

The next week Fouratt again took the win, this time from Village Inn 16-5. Stacey White was again pitcher of record, with two doubles and going 3-4. Tammy Fuller (F) hit a triple, with Tammi Klauman going 3-3. Jessica Jacinto 3-4, Michelle Melicia 3-4. Tammi Klauman and Jessica Jacinto also each scored three runs. Elvina Scott (F) made a beautiful diving catch of a line drive.

In a makeup game the next day, Fouratt lost to R & R Construction 12-4. Nicole Walton pitched the win. Michelle Melicia doubled for Fouratt and went 2-3, along with Tammi Klauman and Tammy Fuller. Fouratt made a great double play on an attempted double steal with runner out trying to steal home. Tammy Fuller threw a relay throw to Michelle Melicia, catching a runner at second base.

Saturday at Garland Park

Local Audubon Society to go owling in CV

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society is scheduled to conduct a field trip to Chews Ridge in upper Carmel Valley Saturday, May 21. Participants should meet at Garland Ranch Park at 7:30 a.m. and bring lunch and dinner if planning to stay overnight to watch for owls. The leader of this trip is Dennis Serdehely who may be contacted at 394-2126.

President of the Monterey Peninsula chapter is Jo Stallard, who recently was the recipient of an Audubon chapter award signed by the national president, Russ Peterson, for outstanding conservation work by a chapter member.

Another award for outstanding work in the conservation field to a non-member was received by Tom Keating and Don Cross for their work on the effects of the gill net fishing method and to assess the impact of gill net fishing on fish and marine life on the Monterey Peninsula. Croll and Keating are graduate students at the Moss Landing Marine Laboratories.

Ms. Stallard attended a board meeting at Hastings Reservation recently and new officers were elected. Dennis Serdehely was voted the new president and will take the post July 1.

"The purpose of the Audubon Society is the preservation of the environment and the creatures that inhabit the environment. Also important is education and legislation. We press for legislative methods that would enable us to retain as much as possible the natural environment," Ms. Stallard said.

"We have field trips to see birds and plants — but mainly for birding — for raw beginners to adults. Our monthly meetings include programs in which we try to get varied speakers of interest," she added.

The meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at Canterbury Woods auditorium, 651 Sinex Ave., Pacific Grove. The meetings are free and open to the public. There will not be meetings during the months of July and August.

"This chapter was established in 1940 and it now has about 1,000 members — we increased our membership by 100 last year," Ms. Stallard said.

The Monterey Peninsula chapter includes Monterey and Santa Cruz counties. A conservation committee keeps track of local and state issues that need letters written to legislators as to what needs to be done.

"The essence is the enjoyment of what we're trying to say, we're not trying to be too one sided; we enjoy the outdoors without letting it get to us that increased population and its devastation on the environment is all around us; we want to mitigate the impact while still enjoying the outdoors," Ms. Stallard explained.

"The Hastings meeting was delightful," Ms. Stallard said. "We saw a red-shouldered hawk's nest with an infant sitting in it; a rare black-chinned hummingbird, black-headed grosbeaks, Lasuli Bunting, violet green swallows, goldfinches and warblers," she added. Hastings Reservation, located 30 miles up Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Valley Village, is a study area for University of California graduates untampered by the general public.

For an application for joint membership in the National Audubon Society and the Monterey Peninsula Chapter, write to the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society, P.O. Box 5656, Carmel, CA 93921. To report observations, phone the Monterey Bay Area Rare Bird Alert at 899-3030.

Pebble Beach wine festival focuses on Mendocino

The cream of California wines will be poured, smelled and tasted as the Mendocino Wine Festival gets underway at 1 p.m. Sunday, May 22 at The Lodge in Pebble Beach.

Admission is $8 per person and includes hors d'oeuvres, a selection of cheeses and unlimited tastes of Mendocino County wines. The festival will continue until 5 p.m.

Most of the wineries in the northernmost area of the North Coast's wine producing regions will pour their newly released wines. Mendocino County is among the state's top premium wine grape producing areas and has increased its number of wineries by nearly two dozen in the past 10 years.

Varied soils and microclimates give Mendocino winemakers an opportunity to produce wines which range from Cabernet Sauvignon and Zinfandel to Gewurztraminer and Riesling.

Wineries at the festival include Braren Pauli, Greenwood Ridge, Hidden Cellars, McDowell Valley, Mountain House, Parsons Creek, Scharffenberger Cellars, Tijsseling and William Baccala as well as established names such as Fetzer, Edmeades, Cresta Blanca, Milano, Weibel, Hush and Tyland.

Tickets must be purchased in advance at Nielsen Brothers Market in Carmel or the Company Store in Pebble Beach.

Spring T-shirt madness

A SPECIAL design occupations class project at Carmel High School has probably produced more zany T-shirts than any gift shop on Ocean Avenue could offer. Teacher Sue Williams-Pierke gave the students a plain white T-shirt and told them to go to work. Creations ranged from dye-transfers to vests

Council non-committal on recreation proposal

By MICHAEL GARDNER

ONE COULD view the results of a joint city council and recreation committee meeting two different ways.

A pessimist could say the plan to offer a recreation program for all Carmel area residents received a lukewarm response from the council May 13, which sent the committee back to the drawing board for more details.

An optimist could say the council will finance a recreation program if the funds are available.

The council neither accepted nor rejected the recommendations of the committee. But the citizens group did not really ask for a final decision.

The committee, according to chairman Ken White, wanted direction before it continues to develop more specific recommendations and budget plans.

"I think what we're looking for now from the council is direction. Where do you want us to go?" White asked.

Although it stopped short of an endorsement of a new recreation program in the city, the council did ask that the committee continue to meet.

First order of business for the committee will be to prepare a council-requested report on the variety of services that could be offered for different amounts of money. For example, the council asked what kind of program could be offered for $20,000, $50,000, $100,000 and $200,000 annually.

The $200,000 program already has been suggested with the recommendation that the city form a joint powers agreement with the Carmel Unified School District to offer an area-wide program for all ages.

The program should be operated by a full-time recreation director supervised by a separate recreation commission, the committee recommended.

Cornerstone of the program should be the construction of an enclosed heated swimming pool to be built in conjunction with the Carmel Barracudas Swim Club and the school district.

The committee recommends that the swimming pool be located on the Sunset Center north field. Alternatives could be to renovate and enclose the existing high school pool or build a new facility at Carmel Middle School in Carmel Valley.

The council also asked that the committee meet with the Carmel Community and Cultural Commission to review plans for the program.

WHITE TOLD the city council his committee wants to meet with the community and cultural commission, but feels the council should be the first to receive the report.

Before the meeting, cultural commission chairwoman Joyce Wright said she favors the basic premise of a recreation program.

But the $200,000 price tag is too high and the cultural commission should also oversee the program instead of a separate agency, Mrs. Wright said.

Cost of the program and concern over whether the council should allocate funds for programs that will serve non-city residents generated most of the discussion May 13.

"If we had an unlimited funding source, I don't think we would be in here talking about it. We would be out there doing it," Councilman David Maradei said. "Some decisions will have to be based on what we can afford to do."

White pointed out that the $200,000 would pay for an ideal program.

Carmel resident Al Eisner suggested that the committee be directed to prepare a "layer" report that would list what kinds of programs could be offered for different amounts of money.

The council agreed with Eisner and requested that the committee prepare such a report.

There was also some discussion on who the program would serve.

The city council appeared hesitant to spend money on a program that would be used by non-city residents.

Councilman Maradei compared the financial situation to the Harrison Memorial Library. The library patronage is mostly non-city residents, but the county refuses to pay a "fair share" of the budget, he said.

But the recreation committee believes that the success of a program hinges on opening it to area citizens with the general borders of Pebble Beach to the north, the middle school to the east, Carmel Highlands to the south and the ocean to the west.

People who live outside those borders could simply be charged a higher fee, the committee recommends.

In addition, many of the facilities for the programs would be provided by the school district, but none of the buildings are in the city limits.

"I don't think you'll see much cooperation from the school district if you limit your programs to city residents," committee member Pat Sippel said.

An area-wide program would also bring back the feelings of community togetherness, committee member Sebastian Bordonaro said.

"Recreation does have the ability of bringing people together," he said.

The council stopped short of taking a position on whether the program should serve non-city residents.

Recreation panel members, many of whom served on earlier committees headed by former mayors Gunnar Norberg and Barney Laiolo, were concerned that this council may also drag its feet on implementation of a program. The committee is the third to study the issue since 1975, but the council has never acted on previous recommendations.

"I hope this is not going to be put back into limbo again," said committee member Betty Plank, who is also executive director of the Carmel Foundation.

"I would say that nobody could accuse the city of going too fast. The city is not rushing into anything," said Dr. Don Davidson of Carmel.

While the committee prepares the new cost reports, the council will review the recreation program proposals during budget hearings in late May and early June, Mayor Townsend added.

JESSICA EISNER of Carmel captured second place in the pre-training level of the jumping event during the 43rd annual Pebble Beach Spring Horse Trials last weekend. Brother Alex took home a third place in the training level jumping event. The Eisners were part of the Rancho Laureles "Rookies," which was awarded the team trophy for the event. Alex and Jessica are the children of Al and Judy Eisner of Carmel. (Joan Brophy photo.)

John Q. Public is alive and well in Carmel Valley

VAUGHN SHOEMAKER is retired from newspapers but he has not retired his paint brushes. Shoemaker paints at his leisure in his basement studio in Del Mesa Carmel. His paintings of Italian fishing villages and Mexican market scenes fetch good prices from collectors attracted to his famous name.

something that went over."

After a while, the editor boasted that "this kid isn't half-bad. We ought to keep him in there for a while."

"Of course, the editor could have had an ulterior motive," said Shoemaker, the street-wise kid who created John Q. Public. "They kept me at the same salary, which was $35 a week, while the man I replaced was getting $125 a week, which was big money at the time. My close friends thought I was crazy to accept $35 when I was doing the front page political cartoon. But the opportunity was so big for me and I wasn't going to say anything."

"Finally, seven months later, they gave me the job permanently."

It was at the Chicago Daily News where Shoemaker really got his education, he said. He sat in on editorial staff meetings every morning and learned of world events — and what the newspaper thought of those events.

THE KEY TO HIS success, he said, was that he understood his own limitations. Since the creator of John Q. Public was just as unsophisticated as John Q. Public himself, he was forced to solicit needed information from "people on the newspaper who could help" in order to come up with intelligent and timely drawings.

With 3,500 employees at the Chicago Daily News, experts were not hard to find. "It wasn't long before I got an education — and a good one, at that."

When his first cartoon hit the front page, he had no political philosophy of his own, he said. "I was just an impressionable kid" who happened to get hired by a "very, very conservative newspaper." He eventually absorbed its political philosophy and won two Pulitzer Prizes for his paper, in 1938 and in 1947.

During the Great Depression years, Bill Mauldin became one of Shoemaker's star pupils in the same class from which, as a student, the creator of John Q. Public had been tossed out. Herblock was hired by the Daily News to be his understudy.

Eventually, all three had won two Pulitzer Prizes and a "friendly rivalry" ensued. Who would win his third Pulitzer? Finally, Herblock won it.

Shoemaker moved to the Monterey Peninsula about 32 years ago and shipped his cartoons air express back east daily. He later moved to Del Mesa Carmel, where he solicited help from residents to help him with his cartoons.

Residents would assemble in his small basement studio and "bounce ideas" around. Their ideas were helpful, he said, "because on the Mesa there are more brains per square inch than any place in the world. These are all people who accomplished something important in their lifetimes. And they got a kick out of it too, because they were able to see some that had a part in the (Monterey Peninsula) Herald.

They were his John Q. Public.

Shoemaker retired 11 years ago and is happy with his paintings, though he is candid about his ability and his success as a painter.

"Being retired; it's such a relief not to have to worry any more about making a living. I can now paint what, where and when I want. It's great."

Shoemaker has seldom shown in Carmel. Instead, his paintings are sold from a gallery in Sedona, Ariz., a crossroad for collectors. While happy in retirement, he is disturbed with today's political cartoonists.

"I'm a conservative fellow," he said, "so I think they are going a little too far. They are just too tough on people."

"I wouldn't want to name names, but I think many political cartoonists today take advantage of the power they have. And there is a tremendous amount of power at their disposal at a newspaper. That's something you learn early.

AFTER A ROUGH LIFE pursued by political monsters, John Q. Public is enjoying the autumn of his life retired in Del Mesa Carmel in Carmel Valley.

"One of the things I always prided myself on was that I tried my best to emulate John T. McCutcheon and J.N. Darling. They were powerful cartoonists without getting nasty or brutal."

"They were able to put their ideas over without devastating anybody. You can stick a dagger in somebody's back and that's okay. But you don't twist the dagger once it's in the back, like they are doing today."

"In the old days, you had to have taste. You had to be a gentleman. It was a dignified profession."

"It seems like that has all changed now."

STILL RACING HIS SHADOW

Pulitzer prize winner

SHOEMAKER WON two prestigious Pulitzer Prizes during his tenure with the Chicago Daily News, including one for this 1947 cartoon. His first Pulitzer came in 1938.

Shoemaker also guided Bill Mauldin, a two-time Pulitzer winner, and Herblock, who won three Pulitzers, in their early years.
